Senate Passes Anderson's Flexible Farm Props

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

After five days of bitter de bate, the Senate yesterday passed the Anderson farm bill. In many respects it i similar to the Hope-Aiken law it replaces, a measure passed by the Republican eightieth Congress last year.

The bill now goes to conference, where another hot fight is expected. The House has already voted continuation of high price supports. The Anderson bill would lower them in 1951.

The Hope-Aiken law was credited last fall as the measure that elected President Truman by swinging the traditionally Republican Midwest farming areas into the Democratic column.

President Truman, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan, Vice President Alben W. Barkley and many others stumped the country denouncing the Hope-Aiken bill as a sellout of the farmers.

Like the Hope portion of the 1948 measure, the Anderson bill continues high-level price supports for another full year. The Hope bill continued them to January 1950; the Anderson bill would extend them to 1951.

Then Sliding Scale

As in the Aiken section of the act of 1948, the Anderson bill would provide a sliding scale of price supports after the full year of high supports ends. The Aiken bill would set those supports at 72 to 90 percent of parity. The Anderson bill fixes them at 75 to 90 percent.

The Anderson bill would make minor changes in the modernized parity formula set out in the Hope-Aiken bill; and others in the commodities it puts under mandatory supports. For instance, it makes a sliding scale for dairy products mandatory; the Aiken bill left the action to the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Not only did the Anderson bill cut across Democratic lines; it also ignored Republican lines. It also left several farm organizations, particularly the American Farm Bureau Federation, torn by disagreement.

Lineup Shows Confusion

The confusion caused by the bill is shown in the lineup for and against it.

Anderson, a former Secretary of Agriculture in President Truman's Cabinet, was supported by Democratic Senate Floor Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois. With them were the senior Republican on the Agriculture Committee, Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) a vocal critic of the Administration, Republican Leader Robert A. Taft, Ohio, and most of the conservative wing of that party.

Lining up against Anderson and Lucas, were the White House, Vice

Overtaxed Jail Frees 11 More In Alexandria

Overcrowded conditions at the Alexandria city jail yesterday forced the release of 11 minor offenders before their sentences had expired.

Civil and Police Court Judge James R. Duncan suspended the remaining portions of their sentences after City Sergt. J. Frank Moriarty reported that the jail, which has a theoretical capacity of 70, was housing 119 prisoners.

On Tuesday, the judge had released prematurely six other prisoners jailed for drunkenness.

Prisoners released yesterday were serving time for petty larceny, assault and battery, obstructing justice, vagrancy, trespassing on railroad property and destroying private property. Time remaining to be served ranged from 4 to 18 days.

Search for Missing 6-Year-Old Halted for Night as Hope Fades

INTO THE NIGHT—United States Marines from the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak head for the Maryland woods last night to search for 6-year-old Otis Mason. They are led by Montgomery County and Maryland State troopers. The search was later called off

The father of missing 6-year-old Otis T. Mason said last night that he doubts that his son will be found alive.

More than 300 volunteers made a fruitless day-long search of the sparsely settled area surrounding the Mason home near Colesville, Md. The hunt was suspended at 8:45 p. m., but will be resumed at 6 a. m. today.

"We had always been expecting something, but we never expected it would be like this," said the father, Leroy Mason, well-to-do plumbing and heating contractor.

Father's Hope Slim

"I'd like to believe he's lost in the woods . . . yes, I'd like to, but I can't help thinking that he met with foul play and will never be found alive."

Mason, a tall, lanky man with rumpled blond hair, was a picture of haggard despair. There were deep lines of anxiety etched in his face aand his eyes were grim. He was unshaven. For 24 hours—since 9 p. m. Tuesday—Mason had searched for his missing blond, blue-eyed son. He had gone without rest or sleep.

Yet, as he talked to a reporter of The Washington Post, he was controlled.

He discussed the glandular disturbances which has plagued his son. On occasions, Mason said, the child's thyroid gland would swell to such proportions that he would be on the point of choking to death.

Kidnap Possibility Seen

Because of this, the boy was retarded and could not go to school with other 6-year-olds. The family had planned to engage a tutor for him.

"As a result of this thyroid condition," the father said, "he doesn't have the reflex actions you and I have."

The family moved from Washington 14 months ago, fearful that his slower reactions might lead

Atom Probers, In Party Vote, Clear AEC

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In a straight party vote, the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee yesterday approved a report clearing the Atomic Energy Commission of charges of "incredible mismanagement."

The vote was nine to six to accept a report on the committee's lengthy investigation of the charges. The text has not yet been made public, but Committee Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) said it concluded "the charges have been found not proven."

But Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), who originally made the accusations against the AEC and its chairman, David E. Lilienthal, took an opposite view. He issued a statement calling the majority report a "cleverly written whitewash."

His statement promised that a minority report would be filed, probably this week.

He charged the majority report gave no consideration to "strong evidence" of soft policies toward subversives and Communists by the AEC, and ignored "the waste of millions of dollars."

It is known that the majority report, while critical of some phases of AEC's activities, is gen-

President Signs Armed Services Pay Raise Bill

President Truman yesterday signed into law a raise in pay for most members of the armed services.

The White House announced that Mr. Truman signed the bill in his office at about 3:25 p. m., several hours in advance of the midnight deadline for his action.

The bill provides an annual increase totaling approximately 300 million dollars for members of the military branches.

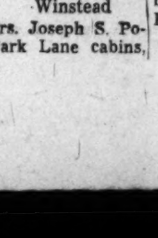
A 5-year-old Berwyn, Md., girl was knocked from her mother's grasp and killed by a swerving auto about 6 p. m. yesterday on the Baltimore - Washington blvd., while in Washington William C. Winstead, 70, a bank guard, was fatally injured by an auto.



Winstead

The girl, Carol Lee Posenjak, who lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Posenjak in the Park Lane cabins, Berwyn, was crossing the highway with her mother and a sister when the three stopped halfway across as traffic approached.

According to police, Mrs. Posenjak was holding the little girl by the hand when a north-bound car swerved from the inside lane, flipped the child from Mrs. Posenjak's grasp, and hurled her to the roadway.

Carol was pronounced dead on arrival at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale.

Coroner John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death. Death was caused by a broken neck, he said.

Senate Unit Clears DP Bill, 7 to 3

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The displaced persons bill, slated to ring down the curtain on this session of Congress, cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday by a 7 to 3 vote.

A stormy reception from a vocal minority awaits it in the Senate today but leaders predicted the DP bill will ride out the debate, no matter how lengthy, and finally pass.

That meant Congress will not adjourn Saturday unless it can do so without sidetracking this last Administration "must."

If a filibuster develops, leaders said they will simply recess over the weekend and adjourn Congress in more leisurely fashion next week.

"Not Against Any Deadline"

"We're not up against any deadline," Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) again told newsmen.

Both Lucas and Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Texas) stressed that conference agreements on two other major Administration measures, farm and military appropriations, must precede the curtain drop.

A parliamentary maneuver by Lucas, coupled with a night session to clear the dockets of nominations and other loose-ends, enabled the Senate to call up the DP bill today.

Lucas simply adjourned the Senate for 12 minutes. Under Senate rules that started a new legislative day and permitted the DP bill to be placed on the calendar.

Only one hazard clouded the strategy of leaving the DP bill until last and then postponing adjournment until the bill passes and a conference agreement is reached—the threat of a disappearing quorum.

Some advocates of the DP measure voiced concern that session-end absences, including several off-to-Europe junkets, might make it difficult to produce a quorum. Leaders said however, they are not seriously worried on this score.

Confirms Three Nominations

As a quiet prelude to the expected sharp DP debate the Senate meanwhile unanimously confirmed the nominations of three members of the Displaced Persons

Two More Cases Of Polio Reported For Washington

Two more District polio cases were reported by health authorities yesterday.

They were a 7-year-old boy from the 2500 block of 12th st. nw., and an 8-year-old boy from the 3400 block of Oliver st. nw. Both were taken to Children's Hospital on Tuesday.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting District health officer, yesterday said polio is a "hot-weather" disease, and from past experience, new polio cases may be expected to keep up until the warm spell ends. At this time last year the District had recorded 107 cases.

A total of 197 cases of polio seven fatal, have been reported in the Washington area so far this year. The breakdown: District, 87; Prince Georges County, 46; Montgomery County, 26; Arlington County, 16; Fairfax County, 15, and Alexandria, 7.

Even Air Rifles

Czechs' Personal Firearms Confiscated by Red Police

Prague, Oct. 12 (AP).—A police roundup of private firearms started tonight in Communist-ruled Czechoslovakia, scene of thousands of arrests in the last 10 days.

Communists as well as non-Communists were reported required to surrender their pistols and hunting weapons. Even air rifles were taken from non-Communists.

Communist pressure also developed against the United States Information Service in Prague. The United States embassy protested vainly.

Small Business Hit

Prague citizens who went shopping found the old owners of some stores gone and Communist-controlled national administrators in charge. This strengthened reports the roundup was aimed chiefly at wiping out what is left of the small business and middle class here.

Arrests in the provinces outside Prague were said to be aimed at picking up Czechs suspected of membership in an underground organization. The next step, it was reported, is to connect this underground with the Roman Catholic Church, then stage trials.

Prague citizens lined up at police stations with their weapons in response to a summons to report for revision of firearms licenses. At the stations, however, they learned revision meant revocation, and they had to leave their guns.

American Protest Filed

Communist cartoons posted in glass-inclosed bulletin boards before the U. S. Information Service library here prompted an American protest to the Czechoslovak government.

Joseph Kolarek, embassy press attache, told Dr. Antonin J. Liehm, deputy press officer at the Czech Foreign Ministry, that he considered the cartoons "provocative, insulting and unfriendly."

"Liehm told me," Kolarek said, "that there was nothing he could do about it, since the cartoons were put up by the Czechoslovak-Soviet Friendship Society."

Battle of Cartoons

The library does not control the bulletin boards, which previously had been used for union posters and tailoring displays.

To fight back, Kolarek said, the library placed posters of Donald Duck and Mickey Mouse in its windows, pointing to the bulletin boards, and saying: "To answer your question, these cartoons are not ours."

The cartoon issue arose after police confiscated 2000 copies of the USIS Czech-language bulletin because it carried a story on the United States State Department's protest over the recent jailing of an American student in Slovakia for five days as a spy suspect.

Truman Names First Woman To Post of U. S. Ambassador

Related story on Page B-3

Mrs. Eugenie Anderson, of Red Wing, Minn., yesterday was nominated as Ambassador to Denmark.

She would be the first woman to hold that rank in the diplomatic service.

President Truman sent the nomination of the Democratic national committeewoman from Minnesota to the Senate.

Active in the Democratic Party since 1944, Mrs. Anderson has long been identified with the League of Women Voters. She also is a member of the national board of Americans for Democratic Action.

While other women have served this country as minister—Mrs. Perle Mesta, former Washington hostess holds that rank in Luxembourg—Mrs. Anderson, if approved, would be the only one this country ever has had with the full rank of ambassador.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen was Minister to Denmark before the mission there was raised to embassy rank.

The post in Denmark has been vacant since Josiah Marvel, jr., left it some months ago.

Mrs. Anderson was born in Iowa in 1909 and is a blonde. She is of Scots-English ancestory.

Her husband, John P. Anderson, is an artist.

Bradley Asks Unselfish Study Of Best Defenses for Nation

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 12 (AP).—Gen. Omar Bradley tonight admitted the Russian atomic explosion occurred sooner than the military high command expected, but he asserted that defense plans "are well under way."

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said that what he termed "Red atom day" makes it necessary that the United States review its rate of military expenditure and "choose carefully the further armaments of defense."

He said the money requests "may cut across preconceived notions of defense and tread on many toes," but it will take "unselfish and objective study to arrive at the best protective measures for the overall good of the country."

Hopes for Agreement

Estimates by the Joint Chiefs of Staff on when the Russians would have the atom bomb ranged from 1950 to 1952, Bradley said, but "their 'atomic explosion' preceded the earliest of these estimates by several months."

In an address prepared for the American Forestry Association, Bradley said his staff had made estimates of the time when Russia could have enough atom bombs "to influence the outcome of a modern war." But he did not disclose that estimate.

Then he said of the Russians:

"They could be foolhardy enough to launch an atomic attack with only a handful of atomic bombs. But of all the people of the earth, they are students of force and of power in war, and should understand clearly the disastrous result of such a gruesome error.

"In the meantime, I earnestly hope that they will see the difficulty and tremendous expense of atomic manufacture, and shall come forward to join us in international control of such a weapon.

"Must Be Realists"

"But military men must be realists. You depend on them to be prepared. We have worked out an orderly time table of preparations for atomic defense. Like a plan for mobilization in case of attack.

Senate Balks At Air Force Expansion

By The Associated Press

The congressional deadlock over funds for the Air Force continued last night as the Senate refused to provide an additional 741 million dollars to expand the Air Force during the next year.

By a voice vote that sounded unanimous Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) won Senate insistence upon providing funds only for the 48-group combat air force asked by President Truman.

Previously the House had insisted upon the extra millions to build the air power up to 58 groups.

At a White House conference with members of the Senate Appropriations Committee earlier yesterday, Mr. Truman repeated his opposition to the 58-group plan.

But Senators said Mr. Truman seemed to string along with the House on a second issue that has held up the huge military appropriations bill.

Backs House on Stockpile

They told reporters that Mr. Truman said he would accept the House proposal on funds for stockpiling strategic war materials.

The Senate wants to cut the House figure by 271 million dollars.

Just where this leaves the measure isn't clear.

Some sort of military appropriations bill should have been passed last spring, to provide funds for the fiscal year starting July 1.

But the Senate was slow getting around to the appropriations bills, and when it did, these conflicts came up.

Congress has been appropriating so-called stopgap funds to keep

Schools to Get Souvenir Bits Removed From White House

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

White House bits and pieces removed during the building reconstruction probably will be given to schools, universities, museums, historic societies and other patriotic organizations.

The law provides these historic souvenirs cannot be sold. The sixman commission on reconstruction of the Executive Mansion has been working on a plan to give them to groups who could put them on public display and who could be counted on not to sell them.

It is possible that the commission may take formal action at its next meeting, now scheduled for November 3.

Meanwhile, White House Architect Lorenzo S. Winslow, secretary of the commission, announced that bids for the $5,400,000 reconstruction job will be opened at 1 p. m. October 28 at the General Services Agency.

Winslow estimated that work will begin around November 1. The first job, requiring about a month, will be to remove and store doors, windows, mantels, the oak paneling in the state dining room, iron grill work and all other removeable material which is to be used again in the reconstructed building.

In this connection Winslow said every effort is being made to "get rid of" the Italian and French influence which has crept into White House architecture and decor over the past century. While there is no exact description of the origi-

Halsey, King Insist Victory Depends On Balanced Force, Jet Tactical Planes

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), yesterday charged Defense Secretary Louis Johnson with pulling a "grandstand play" in secretly ordering heavy cuts in appropriations still before Congress.

The powerful chairman of the House Armed Services Committee angrily accused Johnson of seeking to "make a record" for economy by backing one spending program on Capitol Hill at a time he was planning a later announcement of savings.

His outburst came at the close of another day of testimony from top admirals in opposition to Pentagon war policies emphasizing strategic bombing employing the B-36.

Most of them also took the offensive, urging that the 188-million-dollar supercarrier—cancelled last spring—be built.

Vice Admiral Robert B. Carney, deputy chief of naval operations, told the House committee that detailed Navy logistical studies show that the United States cannot maintain an "intercontinental" bomber force either in peace and war without "disastrous" reduction of essential Army and Navy forces.

He declared: (1) That the present size USAF Strategic Air Force cannot be kept "modern and ready" under "any expected budget ceiling" unless the other services can take additional heavy cuts; and (2) logistically, bombing of enemy cities with B-36s would be twice as expensive as doing the same job either from overseas bases or aircraft carriers.

The Nation therefore, said Carney, must be satisfied of the "absolute assurance of its decisive character" before committing itself to such an intercontinental bombing program.

Other ranking admirals yesterday lent their support to the Navy's contention that a war plan emphasizing the B-36 and atomic blitzing of enemy industrial centers gives no such assurance.

A parade of them—headed by Fleet Admirals Ernest J. King and "Bull" Halsey—pounded at the idea that "balanced military forces" and particularly jet tactical aviation is needed to win.

Vinson's attack on Johnson climaxed a growing animosity between the two men—a fact which has greatly helped the Navy in

Olds Refused Confirmation By Senate

The Senate early today, after a night session filled with bitter debate, refused to confirm President Truman's nomination of Leland Olds to a third term on the Federal Power Commission.

The vote was 53 to 15 against confirmation.

In letters to Johnson and Vice President Barkley, President Truman had said that "the powerful corporations subject to the regulation by the commission have not been pleased with Mr. Olds. They now seek to prevent his confirmation for another term."

Telegrams sent to Democratic officials by National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., said the fight over Olds "is a straight party issue of Democratic action to protect the American people against the monopoly-seeking power lobby."

Olds himself, in testifying about his writings for the Federated Press in the '20's, admitted they were radical but said he was trying to shock the people into bringing about reforms in the economic system. He denied he is or ever has been a Communist.

Johnson told the Senate that Olds has not and is not doing a good job for the people "in spite of his boasting."

"I regard Leland Olds," he said, "as a warped, tyrannical, mischievous, egotistical chameleon whose predominant color is pink."

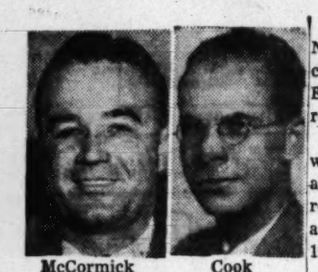
SHIRLINGTON SECTION 1-20

Hanrahan Resigns SEC Chairmanship



McCormick Cook

SEC appointees

Edmond M. Hanrahan, 44, New York lawyer, resigned as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday to return to private business.

President Truman named Edward T. McCormick, 38, of Arizona, an SEC employe, to serve out the remainder of Hanrahan's term as a member. The term ends June, 1952.

The President also nominated Donald C. Cook, 40, of Michigan, to fill another SEC vacancy for a term expiring in June, 1954. He succeeds Robert K. Connaughey, who had quit to resume law practice.

The SEC members will select the new chairman.

Salary $10,000 a Year

Hanrahan, who made $10,000 a year in the Government job, said he resigned with "great reluctance," but felt it necessary to better the position of his family." The SEC post would pay $15,000 a year under the pay increase bill now in Congress.

Aides said it was the familiar story of qualified men leaving the Government because it can't pay them what can they make in private life.

It was believed Hanrahan would return to the New York law firm of Sullivan, Donovan and Hennehan, with which he practiced before coming to the SEC in July, 1946. He was elected chairman in May, 1948.

McCormick, an accountant, joined the staff in August, 1934. He is now assistant director of the division of corporation finance.

New Member Ex-Employe

Cook, an attorney, became an SEC examiner in February, 1936, and remained to become assistant director of the public utilities division in 1943.

He went to work for the Justice Department at the end of the war, and was Alien Property Custodian for a time, in charge of handling American assets of former enemy citizens. He is now a partner in the local law firm of Cook and Berger.

The commission is charged with regulating the securities markets. It also administers the "death sentence" clause of the Public Utility Holding Co. Act, under which electric and gas holding companies are kept from spreading over too much territory.

Ship Subsidy Irregularities Again Charged

By The Associated Press

The House Expenditures Committee yesterday said an investigation has substantiated charges of "irregular procedure" by the Maritime Commission in awarding ship-construction subsidies.

The charges were made by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren in a report to the committee July 11, 1949. They related to the construction of six ships at a cost to the Maritime Commission of 150 million dollars and their sale to private operators for about 70 million dollars.

Warren's report was the basis of an investigation by an expenditures subcommittee. It was the subcommittee's report that the full committee approved yesterday.

Warren's report, the committee said, "contained serious charges of maladministration and excessive expenditures of public funds, alleging irregular procedures, inaccurate calculations and unjustifiably liberal interpretations of statutory language on the part of the Maritime Commission."

The committee recommended that Congress clarify existing law in an effort to bring about better administration.

Senate Group Clears DP Bill

They are Ugo Carusi of Vermont, chairman, and Edward M. O'Connor and Harry N. Rosenfield, both of New York.

The House-approved DP bill, reported without recommendation by the Judiciary Committee, would increase the number of displaced persons eligible to come to this country from 205,000 in two years to 339,000 in three years.

It also would repeal restrictions in the 1948 law that President Truman has called anti-Catholic and anti-Semitic. These require that 30 per cent of the DPs be farmers and that 40 per cent must come from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The bill also moves up the cut-off date (the date DPs must have been in camp to be eligible) from December 22, 1945 to January 1, 1949.

On motions by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) the committee voted to "withdraw" the bill from the subcommittee handling the DP measure and send it to the Senate. The subcommittee was authorized to continue with its DP studies however.

Here's how the committee divided on the Ferguson motions:

In favor of reporting the bill: Acting Chairman Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Kefauver (Tenn.), O'Conor (D., Md.), Graham (N. C.), Wiley (R., Wis.), and Ferguson.

Against: Langer (R., N. Dak.), Donnell (R., Mo.), and Jenner (R., Ind.).

Leading the fight on the DP bill, in the absence in Europe of Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), who urged the Senate by cable not to pass it, will be Senator James O. Eastland (D., Mis.).

Called back to Mississippi by a death in his family, Eastland was not present for yesterday's vote. The committee authorized him to vote on his return, probably today.

Opponents of the bill denied they would "filibuster" but there was every indication the debate will run three days or more.

One Republican opponent of the bill, Senator Langer (N.D.) yesterday joined two Administrative supporters in sponsoring amendments they said might "diminish" opposition to the bill.

These amendments, jointly sponsored with Senators Myers (D., Pa.) and Douglas (D., Ill.), would increase the number of persons of German ethnic origin, expeled from Russian satellite countries, who could come in under the bill to 13,500 a year, waive visa requirements and pay their passage. In addition, the United States would be directed to take the leadership in calling an international conference to consder the plight of these so-called expellees.

Burke Named To New Postal Deputy Post

Vincent C. Burke, First Assistant Postmaster General and former Washington postmaster, yesterday was nominated to be Deputy Postmaster General, a new position authorized under one of the President's reorganization plans.

Burke

The nomination was sent to the Senate by President Truman.

Burke, a "career man" in the department, is a Democrat, born in Louisville, Ky., January 27, 1890. He was appointed a clerk in the postoffice at Louisville January 19, 1907.

After serving in various capacities in the department he was assigned to the inspection service and during an official trip to Washington he met the then Postmaster General James A. Farley who became interested in Burke's ability. Farley named him Deputy Assistant Postmaster General in 1933.

Burke was appointed District postmaster in 1936 and held the position until he was nominated for First Assistant Postmaster General in January, 1948.

Minton Takes High Court Seat; About 400 See Oath Ceremony

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Justice Sherman (Shay) Minton took his seat on the Supreme Court yesterday to give the bench its full complement of nine judges.

Justice William O. Douglas is still in a Yakima (Wash.) hospital recovering from 14 broken ribs suffered in a horseback riding accident, but he already is studying cases now before the court so that he may take part in their decision.

Minton took the oath of office on the steps of the White House office facing the rose garden. It was administered by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson after President Truman handed Minton his commission, declaring:

"I've got a duty to perform which is one of the most pleasurable in my political career. There you are, Shay."

Nearly 400 persons saw the ceremony, including members of the court, the Cabinet, 92 friends from Minton's home town of New Albany, Ind., a 40-member committee from the Indiana Bar Association, Indiana political leaders from both parties and members of his family.

Minton succeeds the late Justice Wiley B. Rutledge. He took his seat on the bench little more than an hour after taking the oath.

Meanwhile, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America yesterday asked the Supreme Court to permit a Negro to enter the University of Texas because "segregation in matters of the mind and spirit means second class citizenship."

The council comprises 23 Protestant churches and 4 eastern Orthodox bodies with approximately 29 million members in the 48 States. The Baptists do not belong, however, and the Southern Presbyterians specifically disassociated themselves from the council's court move.

The legal move, first such ever made by the council, was in support of Heman Marion Sweatt, who is seeking a review in the Supreme Court of lower court rulings refusing him admission to the Texas school. The Supreme Court may decide next Monday whether it will consider his case.

The council declared that "the right to enjoy and exercise the inalienable rights to which every man in endowed by his Creator is not and cannot be confined to physical existence." It added that "man is not merely body; he is also and chiefly mind and spirit . . ."

The church group argued that segregation in education based on the doctrine "separate but equal" facilities for whites and Negroes "tends to maintain a permanent pattern of imposed inferiority and subjection."

Segregation in education, it added, "is in reality a survival and in its operation a perpetuation of the caste system. . . . It is born of the concept of racial superiority and of class dominance which has brought incalculable misery to the human race through the ages."

The "separate but equal" doctrine also is under attack before the court in a dining car segregation case to be argued next week. In this case the United States Government has asked that the doctrine be reversed.

U. S. Brands East German State Illegal

The United States denounced yesterday as illegal the new East German Republic created by the Soviet Union.

Setting forth this nation's stand, Secretary of State Dean Acheson denied the new regime the right to speak for its own people, much less the rest of Germany, and he dared the new government "and its Soviet masters" to permit a free election.

Acheson at the same time reaffirmed American support for the new West German Republic established in their former occupation zones by the United States, Great Britain and France. The western powers will continue full support for the Bonn government, the secretary said, and they will refuse to discuss a German peace treaty so long as the rival East German regime exists.

Would Be Meaningless

"As long as an autocratic Communist regime remains fastened upon the people of eastern Germany and carries out Soviet policies under the protection of a large militarized Communist police force," the secretary said, "it would be meaningless to speak of a peace treaty, or an end of the state of war, or the withdrawal of Soviet troops."

In talking of these things for the Russian zone, Acheson said, the Soviet union is only making a propaganda appeal to the German people. The United States and its friends will not be deceived, he said, and will not be diverted from backing the West German government in an effort to restore "a truly free and democratic Germany."

The secretary discussed the widening East-West division of Germany in two prepared statements which he read to a news conference—his first since he returned this week from the United Nations General Assembly at New York. The two statements were broadcast to Europe by the Voice of America as a counter-propaganda measure.

Protests Are Rejected

The second rejected protests from the governments of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania against establishment of the West German state. Acheson acused the four satellite governments of stooging for the Soviet Union to reinforce the Russian note of protest of October 1. He suggested also that satellites should protest to Moscow, since, he said, the Soviet Union is fully accountable for the breakdown of four-power control in Germany.

"Despite the fact that certain of these (satellite) countries were allies of Nazi Germany," the secretary said, "The Government of the United States recognizes that the peoples of all those states which are neighbors of Germany or which have been the victims of Nazi aggression, have a legitimate interest in German affairs.

"But it must emphatically reject the attempt by governments which have been foisted upon their own peoples by totalitarian methods to criticize, in the interests of a foreign power rather than of their own people, the actions of those nations which are endeavoring to establish democratic institutions in the greater part of Germany for which they are responsible."

World Federation Indorsed By Congressmen at Hearing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A day-long procession of members of Congress appeared to testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday in support of a world federation resolution supported by 104 House members.

Generally, witnesses urged the adoption of a plan of world federation to strengthen the United Nations, and avoid the difficulties created by the veto in the present organization.

Several speakers emphasized that Russia's possession of the atomic bomb makes it the more imperative that a satisfactory solution of world troubles be found.

No Action This Session

The committee has scheduled two days of hearings on the resolution introduced by Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.). There has been agreement, however, not to attempt action on the resolution before the next session.

The resolution would declare it the "sense of Congress" that a fundamental aim of this country's foreign policy should be the strengthening of the U. N. by the development of a world federation, which would strive for peace through the "enactment, interpretation and enforcement of world law."

Another resolution, sponsored by Representatives James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) and Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), also is before the committee. Wadsworth described this as "looking toward the possibility of establishing a federal union." Under his resolution, he said, "certain nations" would be invited by the President to meet and explore the possibility of establishing international law.

Elihu Root Cited

Wadsworth said he was impressed by the argument, also voiced in 1920 by the late Elihu Root, that any international society must be based upon law.

Noting that Judd also supported the Hays resolution, Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), said the two were not necessarily in conflict. He said that the committee could report out a resolution incorporating the eventual aim of a world federation and the immediate step of trying to formulate a system of international law with a smaller invited group of nations. Wadsworth agreed.

Hays said it would be "tragically inconsistent" to let the U. N. fail for lack of the proper power.

"It must be strengthened, it must be reinforced, we must not let this nobly conceived world organization flounder in weakness," he declared.

Backed by Governors

A press release from the "United World Federalists" said five Governors—Chester Bowles of Connecticut, G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, Luther Youngdahl of Minnesota, William Lee Knous of Colorado, and Sidney S. McNath of Arkansas—joined in urging favorable action upon the Hays resolution HRC-64.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) advocated support of the Atlantic Union Resolution. Kefauver said:

"It asks the President to call a convention of the nations that sponsored the Atlantic Pact, to explore the possibility of creating among ourselves, and within the United Nations, a federal union of free nations. It is the only resolution in the world government field which completely avoids tthe danger of a Russian veto, and which would require no amendment whatsoever of the United Nations Charter."

Other members of Congress who appeared before the committee yesterday were Representatives Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.), Hale Boggs (D., La.), John A. Carroll (D., Col.), Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.), James E. Nolan (D, Ind.), Robert Hale (R., Me.), Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.), and Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.).

Hays read a statement by Grenville Clark, attorney, and author of the Selective Service Act, supporting the Hays resolution.

Culbertson a Witness

Ely Culbertson, chairman of the Citizens Committee for United Nations reform, the final witness of the day, told the committee Russia is building at least one atomic bomb a week. He did not disclose the source of this information.

Attacking Secretary of State Acheson's contention that the Russian atomic explosion does not affect American foreign policy, Culbertson stated that it already is profoundly affecting our foreign policy because it is changing the temper and the mood of the American people.

"Fear is coming into millions of American homes," Culbertson said. "Nothing is more terrifying than a frightened America, because nothing is more powerful. As the production of the Communist atomic bomb mounts, this American fear will also mount. We no longer have the Maginot line of the American atomic monopoly."

Suspenders Prescribed For Reducing Waistline

Denver, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—The best and easiest way to cut down a big waistline is to wear suspenders, according to a delegate at the American Dietetic Association convention here.

The dietician explained that men wearing belts tend to extend their stomachs automatically to keep their pants up.

Wene, Decoratic candidate for Governor, has been called off because Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., a scheduled speaker, refused to fraternize with Hague Democrats, it was reported tonight.

U. S. Works to Beat 2 Red U. N. Plans

Lake Success, Oct. 12 (AP).—The United States campaigned behind the scenes in the United Nations Assembly tonight to kill off the Soviet peace pact plan and the new Russian demand for a count of atom bombs. The Americans say both projects are meant only to fool people.

The United States insisted in private talks with delegations and in public comments that a show-up of atomic bombs without full verification would be meaningless.

U. N. diplomatic sources said the major objective of the American drive is to expose the Russian peace pact plan as a fraud.

To do this, the Americans have drawn up an eight-point resolution reaffirming the principles of the U. N. Charter, calling attention to charges of violations of human rights and freedom of information, and in effect saying there are enough treaties for peace now if Russia would only respect them.

Benjamin V. Cohen, United States delegate, in a speech in the special political committee said the United States took a grave view of the fact the Soviet Union is not willing to employ existing treaty procedures but is suggesting further treaties and "further so-called peace pacts."

On September 23, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet foreign minister, called on the U. N. Assembly to condemn what he called preparations by the United States and Britain for a new war. He also urged the Assembly to demand early prohibition of atomic bombs and an adequate control system for atomic energy. Finally, he asked the Assembly to express itself in favor of a peace pact among the Big Five countries—France, China, Britain, United States and Russia.

That is the resolution the United States hopes to kill in the Political Committee of the Assembly. It is expected to come up next week.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jakob A. Malik made the demand for a count of atomic bombs yesterday in the Security Council. The Council will meet again at 3 p. m. Friday to continue talking about that plan. The West is marshalling forces to defeat it.

Elsewhere in the U. N.:

1. Poland charged in the Special Political Committee that human rights violations are widespread in the United States, Britain and Latin America. The committee went through another round of East-West arguments on West charges of human rights violations in Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania.

2. Late in the day a 21-nation subcommittee voted 18 to 3 for independence for Libya as soon as possible, at least by Jan. 1, 1952.

U. S. Regards Nehru Visit As 'Social'

PRIME MINISTER NEHRU
At Mount Vernon

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson said emphatically yesterday that he did not intend to make specific proposals to Prime Minister Nehru of India during his present visit to the United States.

Describing the visit as an event of great importance, the Secretary reminded a press conference that Nehru was here on a good will tour, and that the United States Government had no intention of pressing business matters upon him.

We want our people to see the Prime Minister and to know him, the Secretary said, and we want him to see and know them. President Truman had given the same emphasis to the visit on Tuesday by describing it as Nerhu's "discovery of America."

Officials are sure that the impressions Nehru brings home with him will be more important in shaping India's course than any political or economic agreements that might be made with him at this time. They believe India's cooperation with the United States will be certain if Nehru develops respect for American policy, trust in American leaders, and a clearer understanding of the democratic and progressive nature of American life.

Political or economic proposals are not ruled out — if Nehru chooses to make them. Acheson said yesterday that he would, of course, be glad to discuss any matter Nehru might wish to raise.

Nehru may give a clew to his own thinking when he goes to Capitol Hill this morning to receive the welcome of Congress. He plans brief speeches in the House and Senate, and later will lunch with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee..

He will meet a number of senators and representatives who dislike India's reported intention to recognize the new Communist government of China. But it is not usual, on occasions of official welcome, for Congressmen to ask awkward questions of a distinguished foreign visitor, even when they are meeting with him behind closed doors.

The talk on the American side, at least, probably will be general and will be intended to show Nehru the deep interest of Congress in the welfare and progress of free India.

Nehru was reported yesterday to have felt "overwhelmed" at the kindness he had already encountered in his first 24 hours on American soil.

President Truman walked from the White House offices to Blair House for a farewell chat with him yesterday morning before the Prime Minister moved to the Indian Embassy for the rest of his three days' stay in Washington.

Later in the morning Nehru began his "discovery of America"—on Columbus Day—by a wreath-laying visit to Mount Vernon and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. This time he was wearing a western business suit and felt hat, in contrast to the Eastern dress he wore on his arrival on Tuesday.

At Mount Vernon he told Representative Frances Bolton of Ohio, who welcomed him, that he regarded Washington's home as a "hallowed place." "Many people far away have been inspired by his story," he said.

In the afternoon he received members of the Indian Embassy staff and Indian residents of Washington. In the evening he had his first chance to get acquainted with leaders of official and public life at a dinner given by Secretary and Mrs. Acheson.

Chancellor

Grotewohl Confirmed In Red Zone

Berlin, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Soviet Zone Parliament formally confirmed Chancellor Otto Grotewohl and his cabinet today, then approved his program transplanted from the Kremlin.

The gist of the inaugural speech by Grotewohl, who has a position similar to prime minister, was that eastern Germany and its 20 million inhabitants will join the web of Soviet satellites.

The hand-picked people's chamber sat through a day-long session at which speakers from each party, the Communist trade unions, the Communist youth and the women's league extolled Grotewohl, his three deputies and 14 ministers. Then the 400 delegates, in their one moment of action, jumped to attention and voted approval of the cabinet.

Thereupon President Wilhelm Pieck swore it in.

Helping arrange the show was Gerhart Eisler, German-born Communist who escaped from the United States a few months ago. Eisler is slated for a major role in the government's propaganda machinery.

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy did not accept an invitation to attend the ceremonies. Instead, he delivered a donation of textbooks to the allied-sponsored free university in West Berlin, and told the rector: "I preferred to visit your university. I am sure it is a much more important institution."

West Reviews German Policy

London, Oct. 12 (AP)—The big Western powers are planning to review and maybe revise certain aspects of their temporary "peace treaty" with west Germany, particularly dismantling.

Diplomatic officials reported today the Anglo-American-French program of dismantling West Germany's war-potential industries will figure high in the study.

They said the study will be the three Western foreign ministers and their advisers.

They stressed the factor which will influence the ministers' most is the way Dr. Konrad Adenauer's new Bonn regime behaves in the next few months.

Informants expect the review may take place round about the turn of this year.

U. S. Army, Air Force Show Might in Germany

Grafenwoehr, Germany, Oct. 12. (AP). — Live bombs rained on post-war Germany for the first time today as ground and air forces staged a mighty display of firepower.

Units of the United States Constabulary and the Second Air Division combined in the show, attended by some 5,000 spectators, including high officers of Atlantic Pact nations.

A surprise visitor was Charles A. Lindbergh, who sat unobtrusively in the stand. He declined comment.

Reds Order Demonstration

Paris, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—Communist-led labor unions tonight ordered Paris workers to demonstrate Thursday against the designation of hard-boiled Socialist leader Jules Moch as Premier.

The unions told workers to walk off their jobs briefly in the afternoon when Moch goes before the National Assembly for an expected close vote on his confirmation for the premiership.

It still was uncertain tonight whether the former Minister of Interior would win approval on his compromise economic program designed to counter labor's demands for higher wages.

Veteran politicians believed that, at best, Moch would squeeze by with only two or three votes more than the 311 majority he needs to become Premier and set up a coalition cabinet of the center.

Communists Close Trap On Canton

Hong Kong, (Thursday) Oct. 13 (AP).—Chinese Communist armies today struck to trap doomed Canton's Nationalist garrison of 80,000 men.

Red Gen. Cheng Keng sent his swift-moving columns racing to cut off the garrison's overland escape corridors east and west.

The Nationalists had the Pearl River to their backs—and not enough shipping to take them all to the safety of the open sea.

Red troops thrusting down the highway from Tsungfa, 35 miles to the northeast, seemed the most likely to enter Canton first.

Another powerful Red column has by-passed Tsingyun, 40 miles northwest of the city, and crossed North River.

The Nationalist northern perimeter has been pulled in to an average of about 40 miles from Canton.

Independent observers yesterday toured an area 20 miles from the city where Nationalist defenses supposedly were set up. They found no defenses.

There was no indication the oncoming Communists were meeting much resistance.

(A Communist broadcast from Peiping, heard at San Francisco, reported 10,000 Nationalist troops had been knocked out since the southward drive began last month.)

(Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa, arriving in the wartime capital of Chungking, said there still was no hint of when that city, 600 miles northwest of Canton, would be proclaimed the Nationalist capital. The city was filling up fast with government employes.)

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was reported getting ready to fly from Formosa to Chungking. En route he was expected to stop at Canton and try to heal a breach with Acting President Li Tsung-jen.

Rajk Claims Blackmail

Budapest, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—The attorney for Laszlo Rajk, former Hungarian foreign minister sentenced to death last month as a traitor, today appealed the sentence on grounds Rajk was "blackmailed" by a foreign power into committing his treasonous acts.

But Hungarian state prosecutor Janos Borbely, in a long speech before the appeals court lauding Russia and attacking the United States and President Truman, demanded Rajk's sentence be sustained and five co-defendants also be executed.

Rajk and two co-defendants were sentenced to death by hanging by a military court last September 24 for allegedly plotting with Mrshal Tito of Yugoslavia and American "imperialists" to overthrow the Hungarian people's democracy.

Acheson May Send Jessup To China for Close-Up View

The State Department's foremost trouble-shooter, Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, may go to China soon for a first-hand study of the situation there.

Secretary Acheson disclosed yesterday that he was considering whether Jessup could be spared for such a mission. Last July he had appointed Jessup as head of a three-man committee to advise him on a new American policy toward China.

Until now the State Department has chosen to wait "until the dust settles" before determining its attitude toward the victorious Chinese Communists. If Jessup goes, it probably will mean a further delay in formulating a new policy.

A first-hand investigation by Jessup might help to determine whether Communist China qualifies for de facto recognition by the United States.

Acheson reminded a press conference yesterday that there are three regular tests for a government seeking recognition: (1) it must control the country; (2) it must comply with its international obligations, and (3) it must rule with the acquiescence of its people.

This implied that Communist China did not yet qualify even for de facto recognition, since the Communists have not yet captured the great port of Canton and six of the southern provinces.

Acheson said he had discussed the recognition problem earlier yesterday in a closed two-hour meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Jessup and the other members of the three-man committee, Raymond B. Fosdick and Everett Case, accompanied the Secretary to the meeting on Capitol Hill.

The Secretary declined to disclose what he had told the Senators, except that he had gone over the entire situation in the Far East.

According to one committee member, Acheson said he was in no hurry to recognize the Communist regime, and still preferred to wait until the situation "settled down." When recognition finally comes, the same source reported Acheson as having said, the United States would like to have Britain and France act at the same time.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) told reporters that the committee had received a "rather complete report" on problems involving India, Pakistan and southeast Asia as well as China.

At his press conference, Acheson sharply rejected what he called a barrage of publicity and telegrams from the Isbrandtsen Line, operators of merchant ships plying between Chinese ports. The line has been urging the convoying of its ships through the Chinese Nationalist blockade.

Acheson said he would not be coerced or dragooned (those were his words) into making a declaration of policy which he did not intend to make.

Charge Denied By Spellman

New York, Oct. 12. (AP)—Francis Cardinal Spellman, on his arrival from Rome early today, denied a Soviet charge that he had given $30,000 to Josef Cardinal Mindzenty to finance a plot against the Communist regime in Hungary.

Cardinal Spellman said the New York Archdiocese had distributed several million dollars in Europe, but that the money was only for relief, and was sent through accredited agencies.

He added:

"If for $30,000 democracy with its freedoms could be secured in any of the countries under Soviet domination, all our soldiers and their relatives would know that it was the greatest bargain since Manhattan was bought from the Indians."

Hunt Will Close Up Business, Hoey Says

For Commandant

O'Neill Gets Coast Guard Nomination

President Truman yesterday nominated Rear Admiral Merlin O'Neill to be commandant of the United States Coast Guard.

Adm. O'Neill

O'Neill was named for a four-year term to succeed Admiral Joseph F. Farley, who is retiring when his term expires December 31.

Mr. Truman also asked the Senate to move O'Neill up to vice admiral.

O'Neill commanded an assault transport, the Leonard Wood, from 1942 to May, 1944, in amphibious operations in North Africa, Sicily and the Gilbert and Marshall Islands.

He won a Legion of Merit award for "exceptionally meritorious service" in that command and his ship received the Navy Unit Commendation. He became assistant commandant of the Coast Guard with the rank of rear admiral in February, 1946.

Durable Driver of 86

East Greenwich, R. I., Oct. 12 (U.P.).—A train demolished his automobile at a grade crossing last night, but Clark Wells, 86, of West Warwick, walked away unassisted, and almost unscratched. He conceded that "it gave me quite a jerk."

By The Associated Press

The Senate's "five percenter" inquiry is off at least until January, but one of the men it investigated is going out of business.

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), who headed the Senate Subcommittee that conducted the probe, made the announcement yesterday after a closed-door committee session.

He said James V. Hunt, Washington "management counselor," is closing his business Saturday on the advice of his physician. Hunt gave illness as the reason he could not appear before the committee and give testimony.

Reports of Hunt's activities in and around official Washington set off the Senate inquiry last summer. Other witnesses testified that he had collected large fees for his assistance in seeking Government contracts. One quoted Hunt as having said that "all I have to sell is influence."

Hunt, however, made an affidavit last August swearing he had never said any such thing.

Three Republican members of the committee—Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, McCarthy of Wisconsin and Mundt of South Dakota—had demanded that the 5-percenter inquiry be kept alive until three witnesses could be questioned.

They wanted to hear from Hunt, David Bennett, and William Helis. Bennett is president of the Albert Verley Co., a Chicago perfume house that paid for seven freezers presented in 1947 to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Mrs. Harry S. Truman and other prominent Washingtonians. Helis is a race track and real estate operator.

Bennett, like Hunt, has pleaded illness, and Hoey said his Republican colleagues agreed there wouldn't be any point in scheduling more public hearings until Hunt and Bennett can be called.

Senate Sticks To 48 Groups

the military establishment going since July 1. But the last authorization ran out at midnight Monday. Technically at least, the armed forces are broke.

Reluctant to Budge

Neither side seems willing to budge.

For instance, Senator Wherry (Nebr.), the Republican floor leader, said after the conference with Mr. Truman that he intends to stick with a smaller Air Force and a smaller stockpile of materials.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said that since Congress hopes to adjourn Saturday, maybe the whole thing could be put on a stopgap basis until Congress returns in January.

But an influential House member said privately he doesn't think the House will even go along with that.

"We have an overwhelming mandate from the House for 58 groups," he said. And he pointed to the vote.

The House rejected the 48-group Air Force, 305 to 1.

Yule Tree Ban Asked

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 12 —(UP) A group of senators today asked that the sale of Christmas trees be banned this December to stop "un-Mexican Santa Clausism."

its presentation of its case against the defense secretary's policies.

The Congressmen drew from Admiral Carney the disclosure that Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, USAF, head of the Department of Defense management committee, had placed a tentative new ceiling on 1950 spending on September 8. Not until October 6, did the Navy get a hearing in opposition to its three million dollar cut, Carney said.

Vinson charged that Johnson was "not being fair with Congress" in planning to make the 800-million-dollar over-all slash himself, rather than recommending it to Congress. The 1950 money is still before the legislators.

Georgian Sarcastic

"Congress is not going to be led into a position of appropriating money while some bureaucrat—it doesn't matter who—says I'll do it my own way," the Georgian declared and added sarcastically, "Mr. Johnson goes ahead and says 'It'll reflect credit on my great ability to save the taxpayers money.'"

A prolonged burst of applause greeted Vinson's remarks. The hearings have been jam-packed from the start—largely by naval officers and their supporters.

There still was no indication yesterday when Johnson and Air Force and Army witnesses might be heard in rebuttal of the Navy's "case." But committee attaches estimated that the naval presentation would be completed today or Friday.

Johnson yesterday hinted that President Truman is supporting him in the dispute. A reporter asked the Defense Secretary if Mr. Truman is backing him up.

"If he wasn't, I wouldn't be holding down this job," Johnson replied.

Admiral King, who has been ill, did not appear in person but sent the committee a statement. It declared the Nation has been "overplaying" the atomic bomb and the "bomber that was planned to deliver it."

"Any war plans—or peace plans—which deprive the Navy of its combat strength will become the plans for our own defeat," he wrote.

But Admiral Halsey, who has been sitting in since the beginning of the hearings, took the stand to personally lend his prestige to the Navy's case.

He declared that strategic bombing was essentially "siege" operations which historically have failed to win while the enemy's military forces were still able to attack the besiegers.

Conolly Argues for Carriers

Halsey backed the other Navy statements that cuts projected by Johnson would cripple the Navy.

Admiral Richard L. Conolly, commander of American naval forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, told the committee that his conversations with western Europe military chiefs indicated that the things they wanted most to hold against an attack were "air support for their troops and protection for their supply lines."

"It becomes apparent that these requirements can be met only by carrier aircraft and naval forces," he added.

Questioned about the cuts proposed for the Navy in the 1950 and 1951 budget, Conolly testified that the "entire Navy" which would be left is "less than my minimum requirements in case of hostilities."

King Discounts A-Bomb

He emphasized that naval forces must be "in being" and not in "mothballs" to do any good in such a situation. Unless "strong United States naval forces were available for immediate deployment, our military operations and those of our Allies would be hamstrung," Conolly added.

King told the committee that "there is a place" for strategic bombers in both peace and war forces. But he described as "wishful thinking" any policy based on "frightening" an aggressor with the A-bomb.

"Can we believe that a government hardened to purging millions of its own people is to be frightened at the prospect of the bombs that might be dropped on its cities?" he asked.

"In view of recent developments, now is the time to make a thorough re-examination of our portfolio of defense investments, exchanging some of the speculative issues for battle-tested 'blue chips'."

Clad in a blue civilian suit, Halsey read his statement without glasses. But he declared it was typed in big letters so he could read it and had to move forward to hear members' questions. But the "Bull's" declarations and answers were given with all his old-time vigor.

Attacking Russian cities with A-bombs instead of turning our weapons on Soviet military forces would unite the USSR just as Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor pulled the American people together, Halsey said.

"His people will be fused into a solid, stubbon mass by the fires of their burning homes," he added, "even as we would be."

The wartime commander of the famed Third Fleet pointed out that total casualties in the Pacific naval war were less than the Allies suffered in the Italian campaign. This was due, he said, to the exceptional mobility of naval air and sea forces which enable them to concentrate great power at one point.

And Halsey strongly backed, as did other witnesses during the day, the construction of the 65,000-ton super carrier United States, canceled last spring by Secretary Johnson on a 2-to-1 recommendation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The case for the carrier forces and the big carrier was set forth in detail yesterday by two younger officers—Capts. Arleigh (31-knot) Burke and John S. Thach.

Pictures Carrier Raids

With the aid of charts, Thach outlined how carrier task forces operate in wartime. He suggested that in case of war, we might assault an enemy in Eurasia by a "combination of the strategy which defeated Germany—invasion—and that which licked Japan—blockade.

One of his charts pictured carrier raids on Europe from the Atlantic, Arctic, Mediterranean and Indian Ocean, supporting relatively small scale landings and land-based air attacks.

Thach, one of the Navy's young experts on air operation, declared that by using its "advantage of concentration of force," carrier strikes can "divert, weaken, outflank, paralyze and finally annihilate enemy land-based air power."

He argued that carriers are very hard targets for planes or submarines and present poor targets for atomic bombs. It would take take 50 bombers with A-bombs to score a hit on a carrier, he declared.

Burke, a surface-ship officer, who was chief of staff to the late Adm. Marc Mitscher during the war, bore the brunt of the Navy's case for the super carrier. He declared it was not intended as a strategic bomber as popularly proposed but as necessary because planes are getting bigger.

Outlining in detail how the Navy would use such craft for surprise attack far out to sea, Burke declared that "ultimately" they must be built or the Navy cannot maintain control of the sea against the better landbased planes of the future.

Adm. Thomas C. Kincaid, who headed the Southwest Pacific naval forces under General MacArthur during the war, gave the committee an explanation of why current Army and Air Force chiefs don't share the Navy's views on aircraft carriers.

Most of them, he said, served in the European theater during the war, where most of the air cover came from land bases. A surface-ship admiral, Kincaid stressed the worth of the carrier force in global operations.

He criticized "revival" of the "fallacious" doctrine of unescorted bombers" sponsored by the Air Force in its strategic bombing plans. Unescorted bombing was dropped during the war after the heavy lossees in the Ploesti and Schweinfurt raids in 1943, Kinkaid declared.

"Realistic strategy in the European Theater today," he added, "will provide for holding the Mediterranean, getting command of the air, keeping sea lanes open, holding western Europe, landing of our troops at an early date, establishing bases and providing mobile bases, none of which can be accomplished by strategic bombing."

Admiral King appeared to differ with many of the other witnesses in their opposition on moral grounds to atomic attacks on Russian cities. He said if we are attacked, we "must strike back with effective available weapons from every possible direction." But, he argued, the Army and Navy and not the Air Force alone must be allowed to use A-bombs.

Bradley Asks Defense Study

it was tied to a day in the future on which a specific event should come to pass. That day has now arrived—Red atom day—and our program to provide for defense in this second phase is already well under way."

The first phase, he explained, was the period in which only the U. S. possessed the bomb.

Bradley reiterated that the United States must be prepared to "retaliate quickly and hard" if an aggressor attacks.

He discussed two alternative plans—one if atomic weapons should be used. The other if both sides abstained from their use.

"If our plea for the international control of atomic energy is heeded," he said of the first alternative, "any attempt to overrun Europe will first touch the point of Allied bayonets in Germany.

"If this becomes the case, then the Army must be ready to repel a land assault, with sufficient tactical air power to gain and maintain local superiority over Red bombers and fighters.

"If our pleas for control of atomic energy are not met with honest agreement," he said of the other alternative, "then the blow may strike at the heart of industrial America.

"If that is the case, we may have to invest our funds in anti-aircraft guided missiles, necessary radar screen for Canada and the United States and the Arctic, and the necessary fighter-interceptor squadrons to dispel long-range bombardment attack.

"In either situation, our Navy must maintain control of the seas. It possesses that power of control today."

In talking about a "spreading out of expenditures" for defense, Bradley made no reference to individual services or the current quarrel of the Navy and Air Force over funds and strategy.

erally highly complimentary to that agency.

It holds that the commission has brought atomic development far along from the "low point" in the program when it took charge in the summer of 1946. It declares there is no foundation in charges the AEC employs many persons of Communist leanings.

The report is emphatic, it was learned, on the point that there was no evidence in the long hearings that Russia gained so much as a day in its achievement of an atomic explosion from allegedly lax security policies of AEC.

AEC Gets Praise

As for the much-publicized loss of some Uranium-235 from AEC's Chicago laboratories, the report praises the commission rather than censures it in its handling of the matter.

Without the control policies established by AEC, the loss would never have been detected and the circumstances run to earth, the report said.

The congressional group's staff, under the direction of McMahon and Vice Chairman Durham (D., N. C.) prepared the report. Joining them in voting to approve it were the following Democrats:

Senators Connally (Tex.), Johnson (Colo) and Russell (Ga.) and Representatives Kilday (Tex.), Jackson (Wash.), Price (Ill.) and Hollofield (Calif.).

2 Senators Absent

Voting against the report were Republican Senators Hickenlooper, Millikin (Colo.) and Knowland (Calif.), and Republican Representatives Cole (N. Y.), Elston (Ohio) and Van Zandt (Pa.).

Representative Hinshaw (R., Calif.) had worked with McMahon and Durham on textual changes in the report. He could not accept all its conclusions but could scarcely vote against it. Accordingly, he voted only as "present." Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Tydings (D., Md.), the remaining members of the committee were away from the Capitol and hence did not vote.

In other action yesterday, the congressional committee approved a bill to liberalize restrictions imposed on AEC by legislation passed earlier this year.

To Shift Subject

A rider to an appropriation act forces AEC to get specific approval from appropriations committees before going ahead with projects that cost 15 percent or more above budget estimates.

The new bill would let AEC go ahead, if it got Budget Bureau approval, for projects related to national defense. McMahon explained that the present rule threatens to delay certain construction by as much as three or four months, since it forces such "fine-spun and detailed" advance estimating.

Today the committee will turn back to consideration of a different field of atomic development—the question of sharing scientific and technical information with the British and Canadians.

Talks on a tighter partnership between the U. S. and the other two nations were conducted last month. The congressional group wants to hear more about them and to know about plans for further discussions. These are projected for the near future.

Accordingly, in closed session, the committee will hear from Undersecretary of State Webb and members of AEC and the Department the Defense Secretary's policies.

Gravel Strike Mediation Effort Fails

A Federal mediation session, held after seven weeks of strike, has failed to break the stalemate between AFL operating engineers and truck drivers and the Smoot Sand and Gravel Corp., it was learned yesterday.

The session, called by Conciliation Commissioner James Holden, showed no change in position of management or the union. Again Smoot representatives offered to continue the old contract and add $50 a year for health insurance or as a straight bonus. The union is seeking an increase of 25 cents an hour, but repeated its offer to arbitrate the dispute. Each side turned down the other's proposal.

Approximately 175 Smoot employes, affiliated with Local 77, Operating Engineers, and Local 639, Teamsters, walked out August 29. Union officials said that wages ran from 58 cents to $1.32 an hour, averaging around $1 an hour. All but the daily pickets have been placed on other temporary jobs, according to union spokesmen.

The sand and gravel normally supplied to the area's ready-mix concrete manufacturers by the Smoot company is being brought in from nearby points outside the District with added transportation costs being absorbed by the manufacturers so far.

Alliance Recognized As Bargaining Agent

The Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance (AFL) was given recognition by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday as the collective bargaining representatives for the eligible employes of Dodge Hotel.

The regional office of NLRB, at Baltimore, turned down a challenge by the hotel management that the union had won the representation election some months ago through the use of coercion and intimidation.

Decision of the NLRB office held that the charge of violence, involving two hotel employes, did not show that the worker accused of assaulting his associate was an agent of the union.

Printers Fired, Women Set Type By New Method

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 12 (U.P.)—Women operated special keyboards attached to linotype machines on the Burlington Daily News today as a result of a dispute between union printers and Publisher William Loeb.

Loeb discharged the paper's 20 union printers yesterday because, he said, they had refused to handle certain material for use in engraved advertisements.

A spokesman for the International Typographical Union said, however, there "was no walkout, the men were just fired."

"Refusal of the printers to handle the material," Loeb said, "was based on their contention that a more economical method of production would deprive them of work rightfully theirs."

Yesterday's edition of the News was published three hours late.

By The Associated Press

Crucial peace talks were resumed in the coal strike Wednesday and Federal mediators lined up a series of meetings in new efforts to end the steel strike.

Both disputes are nearing the critical stage. Widespread unemployment and a sharp drop in industrial output are threatened if peace efforts fail.

Last-round negotiations seeking to avert a strike of aluminum workers also got under way. The CIO United Steelworkers Union representatives conferred with officials of the Aluminum Co. of America.

The union announced last week that 20,000 workers in eight States will strike next Monday if union demands are not met. The workers seek a wage boost and company-financed pensions and insurance.

Alcoa produces about half the country's output of aluminum.

Arranged by Ching

The new soft coal negotiations were arranged by Cyrus Ching, top Federal mediator, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Northern and Western soft coal operators offered again to renew John L. Lewis' contract for two more years.

For the fifth time, the miners' answer was a gruff "No."

Lewis did not attend the resumption of negotiations, but was expected to be on hand today to direct the face-to-face contract talks with the Northern and Western producers.

The operators, speaking through Chairman Frank Amos of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., said the renewal of the old agreement until April, 1951, was their "best and final offer."

'One Day Closer'

Vice President Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers told a news conference he agreed with the operators that nothing had been accomplished yesterday but added:

"We're one day closer to a settlement."

Lewis has hinted he wants an increase in the present 20-cents-a-ton royalty payments and shorter working hours without loss of pay.

His 380,000 soft coal miners east of the Mississippi have been on strike since September 19.

In Washington, Senator Style Bridges (R., N. H.) and Lewis, as trustees of the United Mine Workers Welfare Fund, yesterday filed replies to a court suit demanding an accounting of money spent from the fund.

The identical replies made a general denial of all charges in the suit brought by George Livengood, a Pennsylvania coal miner, on September 22.

Refutation Promised

Bridge got out a statement saying he would refute all charges by Livengood.

Livengood, who later was expelled from the United Mine Workers, charged the trustees had "unlawfully dissipated" the fund through payment of welfare and disability benefits to ineligible miners.

Bridges said his attorneys intend to bring out "the real purpose behind" the suit and the basis upon which it was filed. He predicted they will develop some "interesting information" about Livengood, who has clashed often with the policies of UMW Chief John L. Lewis.

Meanwhile, Philip Murray asked the American people to support the strike of his CIO United Steelworkers.

Automatic Transmissions To Be Available in Fords

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP).—Automatic transmissions will be available for Ford and Mercury model automobiles some time next summer.

The new device, developed jointly by Borg-Warner Corp., and the Ford Motor Co., will be priced at "probably not over $150."

Ford officials said there was no present plan of replacing the hydra-matic with the new transmission in the Lincoln.

Harold T. Youngren, Ford engineer, said the new transmission eliminates the need for a clutch pedal.

The device combines a three-speed gear box with a hydraulic torque converter arranged so the engine transmits power in all gear ranges.

The transmission selector, located on the steering column, has four driving positions, plus a fifth position for engaging a parking brake. Neutral is in the center of the selector panel. To the right is the driving range and low gear position; to the left reverse and parking.

Shifting to low and reverse is manual. All other driving is done in the driving position and shifting is accomplished automatically.

Girdle Firm Girds To Fight Falsies' Foe

Chicago, Oct. 12 (U.P.)—A foundation garment firm official said today he hopes the campaign of the Hollywood AFL (Anti-falsies League) will be a bust.

He indicated that part of the business of his industry is helping some five million American women put up a good front.

Anderson Sees Farm Subsidy Cut

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) yesterday told food chain store executives here that improved eating standards and higher industrial employment could lead to an almost "natural" market for the American farmer.

The former Secretary of Agriculture tossed out the possibility of eventually trimming Government farm subsidies in a talk before the National Association of Food Chains at the Statler Hotel, just a few minutes before his flexible price-support farm bill won a hairline Senate victory.

"The revolution taking place at the dinner tables of America"—the rise in food consumption—said Anderson, "indicates clearly that there is a solution to the problem of food surpluses in this country."

Stresses Truman Theme

Stressing President Truman's theme of the close economic bond between farmer and labor, Anderson told the food distributors that high level of industrial employment is "the farmer's greatest blessing." As the national labor market increases, farmers will find a natural market, he said.

"High employment at good wages is what sells the beefsteak," he added.

More than 1000 chain store executives, including delegations from Holland, England and Canada, representing about 15,000 of the country's large food chain stores, opened their four-day sixteenth annual meeting at the Statler.

The mezzanine floor—headquarters of the food conference—had the air of tomorrow's supermarket, including the aroma. Prepackaged meats and vegetables in the latest-type display cases and other equipment lined the corridors.

In the keynote address at the opening session, Lansing P. Shield, chairman of the association's executive committee, declared:

"Our greatest enemy is not the Red Tide from Europe and now Asia. It is the inability of many of our business leaders to recognize that they must serve both their employes and the public."

'151 Hidden Taxes'

Citing a tax foundation study, he said, "there are 151 hidden taxes in a single loaf of bread. That's a lot of termites at work on the staff of life."

Shield predicted that population increase and rises in family income will require 6000 additional supermarkets in the United States and add over six million dollars to retail food sales annually by 1960.

Shield, who is president of the Grand Union Co. of New York, told his colleagues that "business is in the doghouse largely because it has been slow to recognize its social responsibilities. The retail chain industry is no execption."

In a message to the convention, President Truman commended the industry for recent "great strides in the development of sanitary and efficient methods of food distribution."

Emphasizing repeatedly that today's food problem had shifted to one of surpluses and distribution, Senator Anderson urged his audience to "stimulate the sale of meats across the counter as the best way to encourage farmers to put their bumper corn crop into more livestock output rather than "sealing it in the cornecribs."

Easing of Situation Seen

He said the huge grain crops of the past two years "guarantee to me that the meat situation will ease considerably."

In a reference to his farm bill, the Senator said "as long as American agriculture is kept in the straight jacket of ridigities either on the farm side or the consumer side, it will be practically impossible for farmers to make the shifts that are so urgently needed for a proper balance . . .

"We know that we cannot build a completely immovable wall or floor against the forces of nature without courting disaster. There must be some give, some flexibility to resist the impact of shock . . . Otherwise we shall be faced, as we are now, with mounting surpluses which in the end could lead to a national economic disaster."

Today's luncheon speaker will be Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley, former military commander of Berlin, who will speak on the significance of Russia's possession of the atom bomb.

The afternoon session will be devoted to several separate panel discussions on legal problems, methods of financing and employe benefits and how to "further reduce operating margins and thus pass greater savings on to their customers."

Anderson Advocates Better Eating . . .

Anderson (center), is pictured at the National Association of Food Chains meeting here yesterday just before he told the gathering that higher living standards would make for better eating and thus get rid of farm surpluses. Report Hits Vepco Service In Arlington

Service given Arlington County residents in 1948 by the Virginia Electric & Power Co. was "subnormal for a metropolitan area," the Arlington Public Utilities Commission said in its annual report for that year, issued yesterday.

The county PUC is an advisory body to the Arlington County Board.

The commission said that "an uncommon number of service interruptions" were reported to it after an investigation instituted in the summer of 1948.

"A recheck should be made in 1949 to make sure that the unsatisfactory service standards are not allowed to continue," it recommended.

In its report, the commission also criticized the county's taxicab situation as "insatisfactory in numerous respects," but gave no details of its objections.

The commission also said it believed the quality of bus service rendered by the Arnold Lines "was considerably better at the close of the year (1948) than at the beginning." It pointed out that the bus company had undergone a reorganization and change in ownership during the year.

In a report to the Arlington County Board Saturday, the PUC recommended opposition to a 5-cent per zone fare increase requested by the Arnold Line.

Byrd Warns U. S. Marches To Socialism

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 12 (AP).—Senator Byrd (D., Va.) said today "America is on the march to socialism."

Byrd, a frequent and sharp critic of the Administration's fiscal policies, said the pace of the march is increasing, to the tempo of expanding federalized programs and increasing national debt.

Addressing the annual convention of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, he said:

"The deficit financing of Federal problems in time of peace is piling up a Federal debt to proportions in which the liberties of free enterprise cannot survive."

"Destructive Taxation"

Byrd said that if the debt is allowed to grow, confidence will be destroyed.

"If effort is made to check or curtail the debt without reduction in expenditures, destructive taxation would be required," he said, adding:

"In either event, insolvency would result. Neither the democratic form of government, nor a free enterprise system, can exist in national insolvency."

Byrd said that if "socialized housing," "socialized medicine" and the Brannan plan for agriculture are approved by the Congress, they "will irrevocably commit us to state socialism from which there is no retreat."

Cites England's Plight

He said those who think they are benefiting from Federal payments should ask themselves if free enterprise and state socialism can live under the same national roof.

"The answer is graphically and tragically obvious in England today," Byrd said.

He said that in England only 70 Britons have a net income of $24,000 after taxes. In America, he said, there are 155,000.

"But the worst of the British situation as it has developed," Byrd said, "is the liquidation of the middle income group."

Only 320,000 Englishmen have incomes from $4000 to $8000 after taxes, he said, and. by comparison, there are, 4,030,000 such persons in this country.

Calls for Retrenchment

Byrd said the United States can free itself from its present dilemma "only by retrenchment in public expenditures."

Later Byrd told a joint convention of the American Hardware Manufacturers Association and the National Wholesale Hardware Association, that "every time your watch ticks while I am making this speech, the Federal Government will be spending $210 more than it takes in."

Flexible Farm Props Voted

President Barkley, Anderson's successor as secretary and his longtime friend, Brannan; the Democratic chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Elmer Thomas (Okla.); the Republican Floor Leader, Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), and most of the conservatives, often anti-Administration cotton State Southerners.

The row also fanned a revolt in the Nation's farm bureaus. In many areas, particularly in the cotton and wheat country, the local bureaus favor high price supports—either the Gore bill or the so-called Brannan plan. In several States widespread opposition to the national leadership in AFBF has resulted from the latter's advocacy of lower, sliding scale supports.

Similarly several State leaders in the National Farmers Union have broken with their national leadership over sponsorship of the Brannan Plan.

Administration Democrats freely predicted yesterday that the Anderson Plan will meet a White House veto unless it is changed in conference. House leaders predicted the conference will come up with a temporary expedient—a one-year extension of the 90 percent supports. That will leave the entire farm program wide open for election year.

Yesterdya's debate was enlivened by the introduction of some charts by Thomas in attacking the long-range features of the Anderson Plan. Thomas said he would vote for the bill, with the promise that early next year his committee will start hearings on the Brannan Plan. He declined to offer the latter as a substitute for the Anderson bill, he said, because such hearings had not been held, and the Senators had not enough information about the Brannan Plan to "vote intelligently."

Thomas virtually accused Anderson of not being fair with him. Because Thomas was busy with Appropriation Committee tasks, he said, he had asked a subcommittee headed by Anderson to study the Brannan Plan. Instead, he said, it devoted its time to the Anderson bill and failed to call witnesses for the Administration proposal.

Thomas offered charts he said were drawn by a man named Baker in the Agriculture Department. The charts were alleged to show how much failure to adopt the Brannan Plan or the Gore Plan would cost the country's economy.

Two Republicans angrily protested. Homer E. Capehart (Ind.), declared the charts were a "fraud," and an "insult to the intelligence of the Senate." He declared that the man who drew them should be discharged from Government employ.

The angriest outburst, however, came from Aiken. He called them "the most misleading material I have ever seen offered in a farm debate." He added they were "on a par" with "the lying to farmers about no storage for their grain last fall." He closed with declaring them "thoroughly dishonest."

Before approving the measure, the Senate adopted an amendment to increase the acreage allowances for new farms under a cotton acreage bill recently approved. The amendment was sponsored by Anderson.

The Senate also adopted an amendment by Taft to permit Government-backed loans of up to 90 percent of the cost of construction of grain storage elevators. The present limit is 60 percent.

The last major vote was rejection of an amendment by Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.). It would have eliminated the provision for 90 percent of parity support on basic crops during the first year of the bill's operation.

PUC Hearing On C&P Bid Set for Nov. 2

District Public Utilities Commission will hold a public hearing at 10 a. m. November 2 on a request by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for an average 13.9 percent boost in local phone rates.

After the firm has presented evidence in support of the proposed pay rise, the hearing will be recessed to permit time for cross-examination and presentation of additional evidence.

The company asked for the rate hike on September 16, noting that its rate of return has declined from about 5 percent in January, 1949, to less than 4 percent in July, 1949. The proposed rates would yield $3,200,000 in additional revenue or $1,800,000 after taxes.

Navy Grounds Two Big Constitution Transport Planes

The Navy's two giant Lockheed Constitution transport planes are being grounded because it costs too much to keep them flying, the Navy said yesterday.

The four-engine, double-decker Constitution is capable of carrying 180 passengers.

The Navy said it costs three to four times as much to operate as the 50-passenger DC-4 transport.

The history of the Constitutions goes back to the early part of the last war when the White House gave the Navy the job of designing and evaluating a large military air transport. It took five years to construct.

The second Constitution was put into service last year. Last February it carried a record load of 72 passengers and 12 crewmen on a transcontinental flight from California to Washington in 9 hours and 35 minutes.

Hilton Hotel Chain Obtains Control of Waldorf-Astoria

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—A controlling interest in the fashionable Waldorf-Astor Hotel has been bought by the Hilton hotel chain for three million dollars.

The sale was announced by Conrad N. Hilton, president of the Hilton Hotels Corp., today.

He said he and Henry Crown, chairman of the board of directors of Material Service Corp., of Chicago, acting as individuals, and the Hilton chain had bought 250,000 of the 366,000 outstanding common stock shares of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria Corp.

This, he said, would give them about 68 percent of the outstanding common stock.

The Hilton chain owns the Mayflower in Washingtoan.

Cut in Pound Starts to Spur Dollar Exports

London, Oct. 12 (NYHT).—Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps today indicated devaluation of the pound was beginning to bring in more dollars for Britain.

Sir Stafford said: "There are already substantial signs of a change for the better in the orders for goods from the dollar area."

He added: "It is of vital importance that we should at once take full advantage of the improved situation."

The Chancelor admitted devaluation meant a "fall in our standard of living." By the end of the year, Sir Stafford said, living costs will have arisen by about three pence in the pound (1.25 percent).

The Board of Trade meanwhile released Britain's provisional trading figures for September. They showed exports totaled £141,800,000 ($397,004,000), an increase of £4,700,000 ($13,160,000) over August and £1,800,000 ($30,240,000) over September, 1948.

Exports to the United States for September totaled £4,100,000 ($11,480,000) compared with £3,300,000 ($9,240,000) in August. £5,700,000 ($$15,960,000) in August to £5,300,000 ($14,840,000) in September.

The board said the September 18 devaluation, because of the time lag, was not reflected in the figures.

Imports for September are estimated provisionally at £181,200,000 ($507,360,000), lowest this year except for February.

British Labor Leaders Discuss Election Date

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Labor Government's Big Three huddled privately tonight over the issue of when to call a general British election.

Prime Minister Attlee summoned Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, just back from the United States, and Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison, Labor's ablest political strategist.

Dollar Deficit Mounting in West Europe

Geneva, Switzerland (Thursday), Oct. 13 (AP).—The United Nations Economic Commission for Europe said today a favorable European production record in the second quarter of 1949 was overshadowed by alarming deterioration in Europe's balance of trade with the rest of the world.

The industrial recovery of western Germany "has virtually come to a standstill" and Belgium, Switzerland and the Scandinavian nations all showed a decline in industrial output due to lack of demand, the commission reported in a quarterly survey.

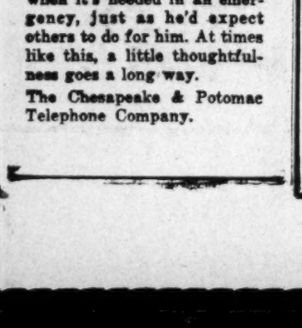
The British-led sterling area's gold and dollar deficit is "one of the most critical features of Europe's current economic situation," the commission said. "Major adjustments appear to be necessary if the . . . deficit is to be eventually eliminated."

The commission warned that Britain may lose the advantages of the recent devaluation of the pound sterling from $4.03 to $2.80 unless she severely limits her own exports to the sterling area.

The survey showed that the United Kingdom's dollar deficit rose by some 50 percent, from 442 million dollars in 1938 to 665 million dollars in 1948, while the corresponding deficit of the rest of the sterling area rose by more than 650 percent, from 83 million dollars in 1938 to 542 million dollars in 1948.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny



I stopped at the drug store for a few minutes this morning and while I was there an anxious-looking young man came running in and asked for the telephone. When he saw that someone was using it, he explained that there'd been an accident up the street and that he wanted to call an ambulance. The man who was on the telephone quickly gave up the line and the young man put through his call.

This situation made me realize how vital the telephone is in times of emergency, and how important it is for us to think of others when we use the telephone.

That's especially true on party lines. A good party-line neighbor gives up the line when it's needed in an emergency, just as he'd expect others to do for him. At times like this, a little thoughtfulness goes a long way.

Hunt for Boy Suspended for Night as Hopes Fade

The Washington Post

him to tragedy on traffic-filled city streets.

The home is at Paint Branch Farms on Notley rd., in Montgomery County, about five miles north of Silver Spring. The house and its spacious grounds are estimated to have cost $50,000.

Mason said he understood that one theory police are exploring is the possibility of kidnaping by persons who had noted the prosperous estate.

Mason said it was possible, too, that his son had suffered another seizure and might be lying dead or stricken in the underbrush or wooded sections which abound in the area.

Servicemen Helping

County Police Chief Charles M. Orme made an appeal to all residents within a 10-mile area of the Mason home last night to search their corn-houses, barns and other outbuildings for the child.

Orme and Lieut. Col. John B. Manley, provost marshal of Fort Meade, worked out plans for continuation of the search today at 6 a. m. when five search parties, each numbering about 50 persons, will fan out from the Mason home and comb and area of 12 square miles.

Three of the search parties will consist of soldiers from Fort Meade, one of citizens of the area, and the fifth of policemen and Marines from the Naval Ordnance Laboratory.

The area to be searched today is bounded by Columbia rd. on the southeast, the Brigg-Chaney pike on the northwest, Beasville rd. on the southwest, and Colesville rd. on the west. Orme will direct the search.

Police were considering all possibilities, even the possibility that the child might have been the victim of a sex maniac.

Also considered was the possibility that the child might have ridden off in an automobile or a truck. He loved to ride, according to his father.

One citizen telephoned police at about 1 a. m. yesetrday he saw a small, blond child sitting beside the driver of a large truck headed south on Georgia ave. in Silver Spring.

The informant said he thought the child resembled newspaper photographs of the Mason boy. He said he was unable to observe the State or the numbers on the truck's license tags because they weer dusty.

There was a flurry of excitement yesterday when it was learned that county police had arrested a 23-year-old man and were questioning him about the body's disappearance.

FATHER AND SEARCH-LEADER—Leroy W. Mason (right), father of missing 6-year-old Otis T. Mason, looks over a map of the Colesville area with Capt. Joseph B. Nolte of the Montgomery County Police. Nolte, stationed at Silver Spring, is directing the search for the boy

Orme said the man was picked up in Smithtown, near Colesville. He said the man, who was sitting on the steps of a grocery store, hailed him and told him he had heard a child hollering at about 10 a. m. while he was on a back road about a mile and a half from the Mason home.

Orme said the man is a magazine subscription solicitor from out-of-state. After questioning him, both Orme and County Police Inspector Rex McAuliff said they were convinced the man was in no way connected with the boy's disappearance. However, McAuliff said the man would be detained overnight and very likely released this morning.

Yesterday hopes were buoyed shortly before 6 p. m. when Orme announced he had received a telephone call giving searchers their "most promising" lead.

Orme said the tip had come from Mr. and Mrs. John Fagan. Fagan is district sales manager for the Safeway Stores. They said that at about 7 p. m. they heard a child crying, "Mommy, mommy," near the old McCulloch farm which is about a quarter of a mile east of the child's home.

Searchers went over this area, which includes a wooded tract and an open field, at about 10 a. m. yesterday without success. Although night was fast falling, Orme said a concentrated search of this area would be pressed with the aid of searchlights.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad brought up a 500-watt portable lighting unit to illuminate the scene and additional lighting equipment was furnished by the Naval Research Laboratory.

However, this search turned up nothing and all operations were abandoned for the night.

Police, volunteer firemen, soldiers, Marines, schoolchildren and neighbors of the Masons joined in the extensive search during the day.

During most of the day, the searching party included about 25 county policemen, about 7 or 8 State policemen, 100 soldiers from Fort Meade, 15 marines from the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, and volunteer firemen from Sandy Spring, Burtonsville, Silver Spring and Hillandale.

Late in the afternoon, the soldiers and marines were relieved. However, Fort Meade sent 26 more soldiers as replacements and the Naval Ordnance Laboratory dispatched 33 marine replacements.

Groups of children were released from Montgomery Blair High School in Silver Spring and Sherwood High School in Sandy Spring to join in the search.

Two planes, one from College Park Airport and one from Congressional Airport, cruised over the area but spotted nothing to aid in the search.

The area being combed for the boy covers roughly about 1000 acres, most of it open country.

An artificial pool behind the Colesville School attracted the attention of searchers. The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad drained the pool and the searchers drew a sigh of relief when they found the waters were not hiding the missing child.

It was just about a year ago that another pool, on the Mason grounds, almost claimed the life of a younger brother of the missing boy, Leon Roger, 4.

The apparently lifeless body of the younger boy was pulled from the pool by his mother, Mrs. Maribel Mason. She saved his life with artificial respiration. For this Mrs. Mason received the Red Cross Certificate of Merit.

The missing boy was last seen late Tuesday afternoon playing with three dogs and a cocker spaniel puppy about a quarter of a mile from his home.

The puppy was found alive at about 5:30 p. m. Tuesday in a 4-foot unused septic tank. The other dogs returned home within the next two hours.

A neighbor reported she had seen the towheaded, husky youngster playing in a sandpile alongside the site where a new home is being built on Orchard Way. Orchard Way runs roughly parallel to Notley rd.

This would place the boy about a quarter of a mile from his home.

Another neighbor reported seeing the child walking down Orchard Way.

Early in the afternoon, several of his toys—a small fire engine and automobile—were found in a second sandpile farther along Orchard Way.

Woman Loses Fight For 2 Sons, Faints

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Mrs. Rose B. Moore fainted yesterday in District Court when she was refused custody of her two sons by the judge, who also cut in half the time that she may see the boys.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts had just lectured the 40-year-old mother scathingly as a person "actuated not so much by a love for her children as she is by an intense hatred for the father of these children" when she dropped to the floor.

She was aroused within a minute and crept over to her divorced husband, John A. Moore, sr., 44, a Mount Airy, Md. farmer. She embraced and kissed him, adding in a clear voice:

"Thank you. Congratulations. I am glad I had two children by you."

She was then granted a few minutes with her sons. The 7- and 11-year-old boys left the courthouse with their father and his lawyer, Charles Patton Henry, without demonstration.

The mother, who under the former court decree was given her children on alternate weekends, holidays, and throughout half the summer, now will get them only one weekend a month beginning in January, three weeks during the summer, and she cannot have them on Thanksgiving and Easter.

Mrs. Moore, a $2570-a-year Government employe, obtained her divorce in Florida several years ago, and has fought an always losing battle to get back the boys.

She claims that the boys become nervous and lose weight when they remain with the father, his present wife and the four children he has by the second marriage.

The sons both testified they prefer to live with their mother. They said they found it difficult to leave her because of their love for her. They said they preferred the Sacred Heart parochial school here, which they attended, to the Mount Airy public school.

In deciding against her, Judge Letts said:

"I must say this is a recurrent case. It seems that this court has tried this case just about twice each year.

"This mother is a contumacious person. She is perverse in resisting constituted authority. She first went into court and asked for the custody of the children. That court gave her custody. Then she didn't want the children and she wanted Mr. Moore to take them; and as soon as he had them, she wanted to make trouble for him.

"Now, counsel has told the court that in his opinion the sins of this mother, as he denominates them—it is his expression—result from her great love for these children. The court does not so consider it. The court thinks that she is actuated not so much by a love for her children as she is by an intense hatred for the father, and he believes that she has deliberately and knowingly and purposely in every possible way, since she turned the boys over to their father, tried to bedevil him.

"She has been stubborn and unruly from the start, and I assume she intends to continue that kind of a practice; and because of her conduct and her manifest impertinence I think the privileges that have heretofore been extended to her are too generous."

The judge's ruling was made after an impassioned one-hour plea "to give the boys a chance to stay with the mother they love" by Mrs. Moore's attorney, Nicholas J. Chase.

After the decision, Mrs. Moore said:

"It was if I had been hit with a ton of bricks. I feel as if the judge took my life from me."

2 Policemen Suspended For Drinking

Two more Metropolitan policemen have been suspended for drunkenness, bringing to four the total of such suspensions in the last four days, it was disclosed yesterday.

The new suspensions involve Pvts. James T. Phillips, 34, of the Eighth Precinct and Joseph E. Slattery, 30, a traffic division motorcycle policeman.

Phillips, who has been on the force eight years, was suspended shortly before Tuesday midnight after Lieut. Karl G. McCormick noticed that he appeared "sleepy" and smelled liquor on his breath during roll call. Since his tour of duty had not officially begun, he faces trial board action on a charge of being under the influence of liquor while off duty.

Last June Phillips was shot and wounded by his wife after a party at their home, 614 St. Andrew's Lane, Silver Spring.

At that time, Mrs. Phillips said her husband had handed her his service pistol and dared her to pull the trigger. She did. Phillips was treated at Suburban Hospital for a shoulder wound. He refused to prosecute and charges were dropped.

Slattery, who joined the police force three years ago, was suspended early Sunday by Lieut. Charles T. Williams of the Seventh Precinct, he came to the station in an apparently intoxicated condition. He was charged with being under the influence of liquor while on duty.

Slattery was accused of being discourteous last March 18 by Representative John A. McGuire (D., Conn.), after the arrest of a companion for a traffic violation.

In July 1947, Slattery suffered leg injuries when his motorcycle crashed into the side of an auto as he was chasing a speeding motorist.

The others suspended this week were Pvts. Robert R. Clonan of the Third Precinct, charged Monday with being under the influence of liquor while off duty; and Ralph Harper, 36, of the Twelth Precinct, charged Monday with being under the influence of liquor while on duty.

"Each case is a different case," Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said yesterday. "Some were on duty, some off duty. It seems like they all come in bunches. It disturbs me. I have lectured the men about it and they are paying for it."

Extortion Letter Laid To Ex-Deputy

Houston, Oct. 12 (AP).—A former deputy sheriff was accused today of writing a threatening letter attempting to extort $50,000 from wealthy oilman Glenn McCarthy.

Chambers

Raymond Chambers, 43, pleaded innocent to the charge when arraigned before United States Commissioner W. F. Carothers. He was released under $7500 bond.

Chambers was a Harris County deputy sheriff four years, office records show. More recently he was a janitor at the multi-millionaire McCarthy's swank Shamrock Hotel.

Chambers was charged with writing a letter that threatened to kill or injure McCarthy or a member of his family if the oilman and sportsman did not leave $50,000 at the door of a Houston home.

McCarthy was sued Monday by Larry Rummans of Los Angeles for $210,000 damages. Rummans, a sports promoter, asserted McCarthy kicked and beat him. McCarthy said "no comment."

Chambers was arrested by FBI agents early today.

Three School Bus Passers Charged In County Drive

Prince Georges County police cracked down yesterday on motorists who fail to stop while school buses are discharging passengers.

Arrested were: Douglas M. Duffy, 29, of 5011 54th ave., Hyattsville; Adam M. Gaddis, 38, Upper Marlboro, and Edgar Anderson, 606 12th st. ne., all charged with passing stopped school buses.

Hearings were scheduled for 10 a. m. today in the county Police Court at Hyattsville before Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens.

Police Chief Ralph W. Brown said police would continue the campaign both on passing stopped school buses, and speeding through school crossings.

How a Power Saw makes Fast Friends
...with a hand from a "Friendly" Metal

One day young "Doc" Grayson was cutting himself some firewood. And he noticed old Mr. Peters over on his own wood lot, hacking away with an axe, and grumbling about his "bad back."

"Doc" was using one of those new portable power saws, with an endless chain of whirling teeth. All he had to do was guide it in the cut and let it go. So, after finishing his own job he ambled over and worked along with the old man. First thing you know they had a good load of firewood.

A few days later Mr. Peters admitted to "Doc" it was the first time in ten years he had gotten his wood in without being laid up with his bad back.

"Doc", he said, "that chain saw medicine of yours sure was a friend in need".

Inside that saw "Doc" really did have a friend . . . an "Unseen Friend" called Nickel.

This friendly metal, mixed in with the steel, makes the saw's teeth, guide bar and shafts extra tough and strong without being extra big and heavy. It helps keep this light, easy-to-handle saw from breaking down or wearing out . . . even when used day after day in logging camps.

Hardy, rustproof and heat-resistant, Nickel Alloys serve you every day in many a way . . . from farm implements to home appliances . . . from your morning coffee-maker to your evening television set. But, because the Nickel is usually combined with other metals, you seldom actually see it. That's why it's known as "Your Unseen Friend."

Write for Free Booklet, "The Romance of Nickel"

We believe you'll find it interesting to discover where and how Nickel first came into use, and many little known facts about this serviceable, friendly metal. Mail a postcard to Dept. 354y, and we'll send you a copy of "The Romance of Nickel."

Funds For The Sesqui

Even though the margin by which the House finally approved funds for the Washington Sesquicentennial was mighty slim, the victory was none the less real and impressive. We dare say those House members who rallied to carry the day for a first-class celebration of the Capital's 150th anniversary next year saved their protesting confreres many a later twinge of conscience. It would have been unreasonable in the extreme for Congress to have disallowed money for this event of national significance after having voted funds in the past for many affairs of less historic value.

Nor was the House vote to grant the full three million dollars asked an indication, as Representative Jacobs regarded it, that Washington needs to be "weaned." If Mr. Jacobs means that it is time that Washington had the independence enjoyed by other American cities, we agree; but his complaint that he pays a high rent for his apartment here had no bearing on the congressional obligation to support the Sesquicentennial. Washington business will derive some advantage from the celebration, but the real benefit will be to the thousands, and we hope millions, of visitors who may obtain a better understanding of this shrine of their liberties. In any case, Congress has done its duty; now, full speed ahead with the Sesquicentennial and Freedom Fair!

Strategic Bombing

Some of the Navy's efforts to debunk strategic bombing contain a good deal of meat. Unfortunately, however, it is difficult to separate the beef from the baloney. How much of the Navy depreciation of the atomic bomb, for example, arises from the fact that the Navy has been excluded from strategic bombing? The atmosphere is not divided into separate Air Force and Navy compartments. How, then, is it possible to consider air power as anything but an embracive whole, much less to justify the unrestricted authority of each branch of the armed forces to develop its own weapons, as proposed by Admiral Blandy?

Because there is so much confusion over even the meaning of the phrase "strategic bombing," it is important to consider basic principles. Generally speaking, strategic bombing is that theory of air warfare which is concerned with the destruction over an extended period of an enemy's ability to make war, as distinct from day-to-day tactical air operations in support of ground troops or to win air supremacy. In itself, strategic bombing does not necessarily imply the devastation of cities; precision bombing of communications and factories is also strategic bombing. But some groups, notably in the Air Force, have construed strategic bombing to mean annihilation bombing by huge intercontinental planes. That, fundamentally, is what the present row is about.

Opinions vary greatly on the effects of this type of bombing. The American Strategic Bombing Survey tells of depressed enemy morale resulting from the sustained bombing of cities, but it also shows that under certain conditions production actually increased. The same figures are used by the British physicist, P. M. S. Blackett, to illustrate the futility of area bombing. Perhaps the strongest blasts at area bombing come from British military historian, Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller. In the preface to The Second World War, he writes:

> That "strategic bombing" as inaugurated by Mr. Churchill was not only morally wrong but militarily wrong and politically suicidal—one only has to look at central Europe today to see this . . . The bombardments of obliteration, as resorted to by so many generals, are as clumsy as they are unremunerative.

The argument over the capabilities of the B-36 is incidental to the basic questions of (1) whether the annihilation concept of strategic bombing actually serves a military objective and (2) whether the wanton destruction it causes is in the long-range national interest. What is at stake is as much a political as a military decision, and it has truly tremendous significance. More and more it is apparent that the National Security Council and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been so preoccupied with day-to-day matters that there has been no integration of strategy with national objectives. Even the President's Air Policy Commission appears to have assumed uncritically that strategic bombing would be employed as a weapon of devastation.

Valuable as they are, the current congressional hearings cannot hope to arrive at any profound and unprejudiced determination. The real implication of the present exchange of brickbats is that before there can be any fundamental resolution of the issue, there must be an impartial top level study—preferably by a civilian board as suggested by General Arnold—to evaluate strategic bombing in the broader context of what this country should seek to achieve during and after a war.

Record Of Congress

As Congress nears the end of its 1949 session, it is the subject of warm praise from the White House. President Truman has put out a 14-page summary of the recommendations he has made to the present Congress and of the action taken. His secretary says that the document shows "a remarkable record of achievement." Only a year ago Mr. Truman was lambasting the Eightieth Congress as one of the worst we ever had. We doubt that the public has noticed any such marked change in the performance of Congress as the President's attitude suggests. Nor does the record sustain his assumption that Congress has shifted from darkness to light.

On the whole the record of the 1949 session is creditable. Especially in the field of foreign affairs, Congress has met its obligations with responsibility and statesmanship. The North Atlantic Pact was ratified, and the mutual defense assistance program now needs only an appropriation to make it effective, and this is expected imminently. Congress also extended the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, passed the United Nations Participation Act and ratified the International Wheat Agreement, in addition to continuing ECA. This is an impressive record. It must be matched, however, against an impressive record in international affairs for the Eightieth Congress. It was that Congress which approved ECA initially and took a long step toward the North Atlantic Pact by passing the Vandenberg resolution.

In both the 1948 and 1949 sessions the international record is much more constructive than the domestic. The outstanding achievement of the present session in this sphere has been enactment of the low-rental housing and slum-clearance bill which the Eightieth Congress failed to pass. Both houses have also passed measures raising the minimum wage, and it is hoped that an agreement will be reached before the adjournment is taken. Substantial strides toward reorganization of the executive branch of the Government were taken in both 1947 (when the Hoover Commission was set up) and in 1949. The present session, however, has defeated President Truman's constructive plan to create a department of welfare. Conferees have agreed on the important executive pay bill, and it will presumably be passed before adjournment.

It is no disparagement of what the present Congress has accomplished to note the enormous unfulfilled portions of the President's program. Nothing has been done to reverse the actions for which Mr. Truman most severely condemned the Eightieth Congress in the last campaign. Efforts to get a new labor relations law and civil rights legislation out of the present Congress were a flat failure. Nor has the President's health program gotten beyond the debate stage. Even the less controversial measures to expand medical schools, public health services and physical examinations for school children await action. The great disappointment of the session is the failure of the aid-to-education bill. Likewise the National Science Foundation awaits a congressional license to begin its vital work. Other problems that will impinge heavily upon the next session are revision of the antitrust laws, safeguarding of coastal oil, home rule for the District of Columbia, Statehood for Hawaii and Alaska, and repeal of the tax on oleomargarine.

One fact that should not be overlooked is that many of the legislative projects which have been initiated in the present session may be completed in the next—if the Senate is able to avoid a prolonged filibuster over civil rights. In its two years the Eighty-first Congress should be able to improve on the record of its predecessor. Of course, much more should be expected of it because Congress and the White House are now controlled by the same party. In the record to date, however, it is impossible to see any change in either pace or attitude that justifies President Truman's drastic shift from mud to roses.

DP Decision

The Senate will have its long-delayed chance today or tomorrow to act on the displaced persons bill adopted by the House June 1. The futility and senselessness of the delay was made evident by the fact that when the Judiciary Committee finally wrested the measure from the McCarran subcommittee which had clung to it so stubbornly, it was unable to make any recommendation in reporting it to the Senate. The sole result of the subcommittee's protracted brooding was that some thousands of DPs in Europe saw hope thwarted and liberation deferred.

If the House bill is adopted by the Senate, it will amend existing DP legislation in two important ways: It will increase the number of refugees admissible under the measure from 205,000 over a two-year period to 339,000 over a three-period; and it will eliminate certain provisions which discriminated flagrantly against Catholics and Jews. The first amendment is dictated by the obligation of the United States to assume a proportionate share of the world's responsibility toward people who were made homeless by the war and by political and religious persecution. The second amendment is dictated, perhaps even more imperatively, by the obligation of the United States to respect its own tradition of religious tolerance.

We are confident, now that the Senate is to be allowed to vote, that it will vote affirmatively on these changes. If it does so, it will rekindle the torch held by that heroic figure in the harbor of New York and once more light the way for oppressed men and women yearning to be free.

Tariff Cuts

Another sign of American aid to enable the world earn more dollars (to spend in America) is the list of tariff adjustments which have been anounced. Devaluation in itself was tantamount to a slice off the tariff. The new cuts will add to the advantage. They have been negotiated with 10 nations, but under the most-favored-nation clause, the benefits will accrue to all the other trading nations. This is called the multilateral system, as contrasted with the bilateral system, under which tariff favors are restricted to the two parties. An example of the difference is the new agreement with Sweden. Under this agreement the adjustments in the American tariff on particular items of iron and steel will be generalized to other iron and steel producers. That is to say, Britain will benefit with Sweden, though not to the same extent. It is this system of a fair field and no favor that is regarded by all liberals as one of the cornerstones of peace.

The tariff agreements are, of course, reciprocal. That is to say, the cuts that have been authorized in the American tariff are in return for tariff cuts that the other party will make in respect of American products. Sweden, for instance, will reduce her duty on automobiles from 15 to 20 percent. The sum total is the further opening of markets, or the increased willingness of people to trade. This corresponds to self-interest—and not only the enlightened variety which yields dividends indirectly and in the long-run, but the here-and-now variety. This more and more businessmen have come to believe, as was shown last month in the chorus which succeeded in persuading Congress to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

The self-interest, nowadays, is strategic as well as economic. Prosperity is not so recognizably one and indivisible as security, and the best way of beating back the forces of darkness is to encourage trade for the fruits of labor. For, if we all labor together, then the sense of security will be diffused, and our enemies, who are trying to frustrate this togetherness, will be correspondingly discomfited.

Tokyo Rose

Mrs. Iva Toguri d'Acquino, better known to veterans of the Pacific forces as Tokyo Rose, has been convicted in a Federal Court at San Francisco of treason to the United States and has been sentenced to 10 years in prison. The verdict and sentence are now being appealed, but there seems very little likelihood that they will be reversed.

It is hard to see how the trial could have had any other outcome. Her case was almost identical with that of Miss Mildred Gillars, or Axis Sally, who was convicted here in Washington last March on the same charge. In each case there was reason to doubt that the broadcast programs, by which the charge of treason was technically sustained, actually did much damage to the morale or fighting abilities of the troops who listened to them, but it was undoubtedly the hope and belief of the German and Japanese propaganda offices that they would do so. And, indeed, both programs seem to have been rather more popular with the American forces than many that were arranged for them by our own propagandists.

Nevertheless, it is now well recognized that propaganda is an important form of warfare and that to engage in it in behalf of an enemy comes within the constitutional definition of an overt act. The motives which led Miss Gillars and Mrs. d'Acquino into such a course of conduct are not altogether clear. In Miss Gillars' case the defense was based upon the hypnotic fascination said to have been exercised upon her by the late Max Otto Koischwitz, her former teacher at Hunter College. There also was an effort to show that after his death Miss Gillars had been obliged by a form of intimidation to continue the broadcasts against her will. In Mrs. d'Acquino's case the plea was economic necessity. She had found herself, she said, in Tokyo without a job and felt there was nothing to do but accept the one that was offered her.

As in the case of Axis Sally, the jury that tried Tokyo Rose agreed upon its verdict only after protracted deliberations. This was an indication of a certain sympathy for her which is probably shared by a large number of Americans. For while it is true that Mrs. d'Acquino was by birth an American citizen, her citizenship, like the citizenship of most American-born Japanese, was of the sort that is unrecognized by Caucasian neighbors. Thus the sentiment of the jury toward her was probably much like that of the frontier jury which reported of a defendant that they considered him "guilty but not so dern awful guilty."

Thus, while it is appropriate that Tokyo Rose should be punished in some manner, hers seems a case that might well be included by-and-by in some general act of amnesty or oblivion. But that, of course, is also true of the persons sentenced to prison as conscientious objectors, many of whom are still there.

Training For 1890's Living

By Malvina Lindsay

Youth's Rebellion

AMONG THE many surpluses this country is accumulating is a growing number of half-educated youth, prepared neither for work or personal living. The one-half of this fall's freshmen who will drop out before graduation is a threat not only to the labor market. For many of these drop-outs will not acquire the background to become capable fathers, mothers or citizens.

Yet 16-year-old Johnny Doakes who is leaving school in his sophomore year will ask—probably with a yawn—"What's in it for me?" when he is urged to continue. Hard put to answer Johnny's question are most high schools. That is because they are still educating for the life of yesterday.

One effort to do something about this is being made through the recently organized Commission on Life Adjustment Education for Youth, meeting this week at the United States Office of Education. This meeting has come on the heels of a study just published by the National Child Labor Committee as to why boys and girls are dropping out of high school.

This study showed the majority of dropouts took place at the age of 16 or 17 before the end of the second year. Chief reasons for leaving school were: desire to work and make money; not getting on in studies; didn't like a certain teacher; didn't like a certain subject; not interested, nothing in it, can learn more outside.

UNLESS THE American high school is related more to the life of today, youth's rebellion against it will present another national youth problem, the advocates of life adjustment education warn. The commission now in session grew out of concern over high school dropouts by public school administrators and vocational education leaders in 36 States. The biggest problem in education today they say is how to induce Johnny Doakes to stay in school.

The main reason Johnny is so bored with high school is that he feels he isn't getting anywhere with his personal life. Horse and buggy curriculums are based on the assumption that everyone is going to college or entering the professions—as indeed most high school students of the good old days of restricted education were. Yet Johnny doesn't look forward to either. And unless he has outstanding ability it is all to the good that he is keeping out of the professional log-jam.

True, in many high schools Johnny can get vocational training, but even the skilled trades don't employ a high percentage of American workers. Since Johnny likely is going to be one of the millions who perform simple routine jobs he may well ask of high school "What's in it for me?"

AT THIS point some solid citizen is bound to rise and declaim that what Johnny needs is a good grounding in the three Rs and less new-fangled nonsense. Well, believe it or not, Johnny is getting that in most schools. Tests show typical teenagers of today are better in their reading, writing, spelling and figuring than were those participating in similar tests after World War I.

Life adjustment educators agree this is important. But they also insist that Johnny's teaching in these and other subjects be related to the life of today—that for example he get at least a bird's eye view of atomic energy and current world happenings, also some practical guidance for getting and holding jobs, and for handling his human relations in his home, neighborhood, and work life.

It would be unfair to adapt high school curriculums to fit the Johnny Doakeses as to gear them wholly to students who are preparing for the professions. But the more progressive high schools are trying to work out wide enough ranges of curriculums to meet needs of the college preps, the skilled trades students and the Johnny Doakeses. This will not shut Johnny out of cultural studies; in fact he particularly needs this outlet since his work in the world is not likely to be very exciting.

If Johnny can be kept sufficiently interested to stay in school another two years, and studies and teaching methods can be related to his rather than his grandfather's needs, he should be able to get a training for an outlook on today's world that will make him both happier and more useful.

Could it be that General Vaughan has forgotten that in addition to Mr. Truman and Mrs. Vaughan he is also responsible to me—and millions like me—who, God help us, pay his salary?

"Race In The Army"

May I commend The Washington Post for its critical editorial of October 6 on the Army's new racial policy. Both the Navy and the Air Force met the issue squarely and have provided for equality of opportunity, but the Army has labored and brought forth a mouse.

In the past when Negro citizens volunteered for the Army they did so out of loyalty to their country and with the hope that such a service might win for them the boon of first class, unsegregated citizenship. After two wars to strengthen democracy, the same old prejudices and rationalizations still operate in the minds of top brass.

One of the reasons some Negro units in the past two wars did not live up to expectations was the lack of morale bound to exist in a segregated army. I know of high class Negro draftees with college education and culture who had to belong to and work in labor units composed of men who could hardly read and write and had the culture of the slums. On the other hand when Negroes were integrated with white troops in battles on the western European front they fought as valiantly as any. Often in camps in the South the uniform on a Negro soldier had no respect from the civilian community, as Joe Louis, Jackie Robinson and countless hundreds others found out.

Someday again Negroes may be called upon to defend this Nation. Many of them will be as willing as in the past to defend the only home they have.

But I am sure if the Army goes all out and drops its silly segregation policy, as this Nation once abolished slavery, it will find its Negro citizenry the most loyal defense it can count on.

Navy Morale

In your October 6 issue, Mr. Douglas Sager takes the Navy to task because an admiral has said that morale is low. He cites the Army to illustrate what he thinks should be done and asks why the Navy admirals have not busied themselves with such reforms.

Because of the high degree of mechanization which the Army developed in World War II, technical training is now being aligned with advancement in rating, for the first time. The Army first christened this program career guidance and began steps toward its gradual introduction in 1947. In the Navy, however, men have been designated since earliest times not merely by rating level (i.e. corporal or sergeant, as in the Army) but according to their crafts (boatswain's mate first class, chief gunner's mate, radioman second class). Not only has the Navy always had its skilled technicians; for a quarter century it has had a series of training courses, one for each level of each rating, which are used in a program of on-the-job training similar to apprentice-training in industry.

The Navy Education Services program, which includes what the Army title designates as Information and Education, has always been available to officers and enlisted men alike. There are figures available, incidentally, which show that these facilities, developed jointly by the armed services, have been used by a very much higher percentage of all personnel in the Navy than in the Army.

By stressing teamwork within its ranks as well as on the radio, no doubt the Army will eventually achieve the same success which the Navy has long enjoyed in recruiting men and women of ability. Teamwork is so much a part of the Navy that it needs no proclamation on the radio.

What is wrong with Navy morale today is not that its admirals have left something undone for the welfare and comfort of naval personnel. Most experienced naval personnel have strong opinions about our national defense strategy—opinions that have grown out of grim experience in war. They believe in their leaders and, like them, in this Nation's need for a strong Navy.

Parade Tieups

Who is responsible for issuing a permit for a parade that ties up all downtown traffic for two hours on a busy Saturday?

I am one of those unfortunate thousands who tried to drive around the Shriners' parade last Saturday only to find that after driving for 50 minutes I was still in the parade area. One policeman I met along the route didn't know how traffic was being routed, didn't know where to send traffic that was flowing past his point, and remarked that it was the most mismanaged affair he had ever witnessed. Some of the Sunday papers stated that street car traffic was at a standstill for two hours and indicated that the transit company had had no prior knowledge of what was going to take place.

This city has an excellent parade route along Constitution ave. Practically all parades, except those held by the Shriners, are routed along this beautiful avenue where interference with traffic can be held to a minimum.

"Your Money Back"

The author of your editorial of October 9, on the subject of the guaranty of investments bill now before Congress makes statements which seem to reveal misunderstanding of what is actually being proposed.

He says that "Not only would it (the amended bill now before the Banking and Currency Committees) insure the investor receipt of dollars in payment of profits or dividends; it would safeguard the investor against 'loss resulting from expropriation, confiscation, or seizure by action of public authority.'"

This creates a wholly wrong impression. It seems to say that anyone who wished to make a foreign investment could, under the terms of the bill if it should become a law, automatically obtain protection against these hazards.

There is not any such intention and the bill doesn't offer any such promise. What it does mean is that the Export-Import Bank will have the power to grant such guaranties if it decides to do so in appropriate cases under the same procedure that it now follows in granting loans. There is a vast difference.

What obviously has escaped the attention of your editorial writer (as well as a good many others who have commented on this bill) is that the Export-Import Bank now has the power to obligate all its uncommitted lending power under guaranties as well as under loans. It can now guarantee bond issues, notes, debentures, or any other kind of fixed obligation representing foreign investment against any and all sorts of hazards, including ordinary business losses, riots, revolutions, theft, fire and loss of capital from any cause. It can guarantee without qualification an issue on the American market or any other market put out by a foreign government or any foreign individual or entity. It can guarantee without qualification borrowings by any foreign individual, government or agency.

In view of these sweeping powers, which the bank has possessed without any claim of misuse of them for the entire 15 years of its existence, what is the meaning of the present legislation? It is simply to make clear the intent of Congress that guaranties by the bank within the same over-all limitations and for the same purposes may extend to equity investments—proprietorships—so long as the guaranties are within the limited area set forth by the bill.

You make the excellent suggestion that there ought to be some sort of reciprocal agreement with foreign countries. The bank has been getting agreements in specific cases from foreign governments covering convertibility and other hazards for many years. It has had those agreements with respect to private funds as well as its own funds. It has never considered discontinuing the practice. The bank has had experience, in short, with all the "dilemmas" which your editorial writer brings up, but they are not, in fact, dilemmas; they are merely practical problems of administration to be met as they occur.

The objection might be made that to leave these problems to an administrative authority, however good its record, is dangerous; that they ought to be hedged about by specific limitation of law, such as your—and Mr. Herter's—suggestion for reciprocal agreements on conversion of foreign currencies to dollars. But this is only one of a dozen or a score of matters that have to be settled either by general or by specific agreement, in the negotiation of which the bank expects to cooperate with the State Department.

It is a common illusion, not shared by any experienced lawmaker or administrator, that laws can be so framed as to compel administrators to do right and prevent them from doing wrong. It is the sheerest of fallacies. What results from the attempt is to add complexity to the law and embarrassment in its administration without adding anything whatever to protection of the public interest. It is well to remember an old and well-worn maxim that "The power to do right always includes the power to do wrong."

But let me emphasize again what I thought we made very clear in the hearings before both committees, that this is not a blunderbuss proposal to be offered to all comers. It is a minor addition—but one which we hope will have importance—to the already extensive powers of the Export-Import Bank to participate in foreign investment and to encourage private investment abroad. It is to be administered on a case-by-case basis, just as the lending power is administered, with a view to encouraging only those investments which will contribute to upbuilding the economies of the countries in which the investments are made. It is a proposal to supplement public funds to a greater extent with private funds invested with exactly the same care as public funds are being invested, for the same purposes and under practically identical restrictions.

An understanding of this point of view, which is fully expressed in the hearings before the two committees which caused them to report favorably on the ills, may I think modify your views on the subject.

Chairman, Export-Import Bank.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Proof Of Our Intentions

PARIS.—Though the devaluations and the atomic explosion cannot fail to have far-reaching consequences, a reporter endeavoring to measure them now has little to go on in the way of public material. In France and in Britain there are internal difficulties of which the outcome is not now predictable. As to international relations, there has been some comment but not nearly so much as the intrinsic importance of these events would justify.

Lippmann

Yet the meager reaction cannot mean that nothing is changed and that all will go on as before. It means rather that the reaction is delayed because those who best realize the seriousness of events are saying little. They hope they will be able to think a lot before they have to speak responsibly. For there is no clear and evident answer to the problems that have been posed. This is because the problems are so difficult and not because they do not exist.

THOUGH it was a coincidence that news of the atomic explosion in Russia came so soon after the Anglo-American talks and the devaluations, the effects of the two developments are now deeply connected. For the way in which the devaluation crisis was handled has impaired the solidarity which the Atlantic community needs so very much in order to adjust itself to the strategical and political consequences of the Soviet bomb. Never was it more important that the nations of the Continent should have confidence in the good faith and loyalty of Britain and America as members of the Atlantic community than at the moment when the American monopoly of the bomb had ended prematurely and so unexpectedly.

Yet unhappily this has been the moment when the British and American statesmen went into a private huddle, and allowed—when some of them even promoted—the impression that they are a special and privileged group, acting exclusively, when vital decisions are taken. It would be difficult to exaggerate the mischief and the danger of this impression, if it is not corrected before it takes hold—as it has not yet taken hold—of the passions of masses of the people in France, in Germany, and on the Soviet borderland. For how can they be convinced that their security is truly the common concern of the two strongest and least vulnerable of their allies when in a matter of lesser gravity—the realignment of currencies—they were not consulted, were not even informed in advance, about decisions which affected them at home and abroad? The fragile structure of solidarity, laboriously built up in the Marshall Plan, the Atlantic Pact, and the Strasbourg Assembly, has been badly cracked. That solidarity could be broken.

THERE will be a reaction to the peril, probably in a few weeks. It is likely to take form of proposals originating among the continental nations. They will pose the issue sharply, though moderately, and in technical rather than emotional terms, as to whether Britain will participate concretely, at some risk and sacrifice, in the European system, and what the United States will do about it. There may be proposals for the establishment of a European bank and monetary authority which would hold and manage some part of the gold and dollar reserves of all Marshall aid countries, including Britain.

Proposals of this sort would provide a test of the principle of mutual aid, and of whether it is in fact true that Britain, with the blessing of the State Department, is to draw away from the Continent toward union, not with Europe, but with the United States.

THE TEST is one which the President and Secretary Acheson ought to welcome as an opportunity to correct the impression created in September. If that impression is false, it can then be proved false. If inadvertently matters have been allowed to go wrong through accidents, pressures, and rather loose theorizing, they could be set right again. For the line taken in September, in so far as it tends to separate Britain and America from the rest of Europe, is an aberration of the most dangerous kind—one which is undermining the whole organization of the Atlantic community and its relations with Germany and with the Soviet Union.

It cannot be the considered purpose of the United States to do that. It is quite contrary to all our formal pledges and indeed contrary to the mandate of Congress as laid down in the law which governs the ECA. But a special and convincing effort is now necessary to demonstrate that this is still our considered purpose. That will require more than words and we should encourage the Marshall countries to propose measures which would enable the United States and Great Britain to reaffirm their loyalty to the larger community of the Atlantic nations.

State Department Honors 25 From Washington Area

More than a dozen Washington area residents were among 25 State Department employes to whom Secretary Acheson yesterday awarded medals, certificates or other awards for outstanding service.

Relatives and friends of the honor winners thronged the departmental auditorium to see the Secretary bestow the awards. The ceremony was the first of its kind in the department's history. It will be repeated annually from now on.

In some cases relatives accepted the awards for employes on duty at distant foreign posts.

Dentist Accused Of Assaulting Girl Patient

Sheffield, England, Oct. 12 (U.P.). Alan Bush, 36, a dentist, awaited trial today on the charge he assaulted a girl patient while she sat in his dental chair.

Prosecutor William Wood said Bush commented when he was arrested:

"It is particularly regrettable that it happened in surgery hours."

"A remarkable feature of the case," the prosecutor said, "is that the girl made little protest in the surgery and no complaint except to a girl friend at her office. There was nothing in the nature of a struggle or fight, because the girl was dumbfounded, amazed and ashamed at what happened.

The girl said she made no complaint after the first incident because "I though Bush's actions might have been unintentional." But after the second incident, she said, she went back to her office and told her girl friend.

House to Look At Insurance Tax Situation

An investigation of taxation of life insurance companies was voted yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) will appoint a seven-member subcommittee for the inquiry.

The investigation was ordered after the Treasury reported that life insurance companies, under a special formula set up in the 1942 Revenue Act, paid no taxes on approximately $1,500,000,000 net the companies earned on their investments in 1948.

The 1942 formula, committee experts explained, give life insurance companies credits or deductions on certain portions of their net investment income in consideration of the companies' future obligations to policyholders.

In 1942 the treasury estmated that 93 per cent of such income from investments—in such things as real estate—should be exempt from the 38 per cent corporate income tax. This was the estimate of the percentage of such income necessary to meet future obligations to policyholders.

But under the formula written at that time, the exemption percentage in the last two years has gone to 100 per cent—or even more.

Experts Urge Dropping of Term 'Lobbyist'

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter
(Fifth article in a series)

Section 305 of the Lobby Registration Act requires that every person or organization receiving any contributions or expenditures for lobbying purposes shall file with the clerk of the House of Representatives only, between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, a statement containing the name and address of each person who has made a contribution of $500 or more, and the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure of $10 or more has been made, with the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure.

In section 308 the act requires any person who engages himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation to register both with the clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate "before doing anything in furtherance of such object."

The registrant must state his name and business address, the name and address of the person by whom he is employed and in whose interest he appears or works, the duration of such employment, how much he is paid and to receive, by whom he is paid or is to be paid, how much he is to have for expenses, and what expense are to be included.

Registrants under Section 308 must also file with the clerk and secretary a detailed report of "all money received and expended by him during the preceding quarter calendar in carrying on his work, to whom paid, for what purpose, and the names of any papers, periodicals, magazines or other publications in which he has caused to be published any articles or editorials, and the proposed legislation he is employed to support or oppose." This information is printed in the Congressional Record after the close of each calendar quarter.

Any person violating this title, upon conviction, is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both. In addition, he is barred from lobbying for three years and if he violates that provision he shall, upon conviction, be held guilty of a felony, with a penalty of five years and-or a $10,000 fine.

But in some ways, Section 308 appears to conflict with Section 307. Registrants under 308 frequently point back to 307 and say that their principal business is not that of influencing legislation.

In its brief filed with the District Court and still pending there, the National Association of Manufacturers says:

"Since the possible field of congressional action covers every aspect of American life, it would be literally impossible for any person engaged in economic or other serious affairs to claim that his 'principal purpose' lay outside the ground Congress might cover."

Since the passage of the law there have been a number of attempts to change it.

Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.), chairman of the House Lobby Investigating Committee, introduced a bill—HR-5784—on July 27, 1949, designed to tighten up provisions of the act. Since introduction of the measure, Buchanan himself has seen ways in which that should be amended and his investigation may well lead to other changes.

Section 308, for example, specifically excludes any public official acting in his official capacity, and yet there is as much talk of the so-called governmental lobby in Washington as of any other.

Buchanan says flatly that his investigation certainly will include the Government lobby. He will ask the Department of Justice to furnish any information its investigation of lobbies and lobbyists may have uncovered.

Then he plans, significantly, to call first upon the Director of the Budget, and representatives of the Labor, Commerce and Agriculture Departments for any information they may have. Representatives of other Government agencies may also expect to be called.

While there are lobbyists registered for various municipal and area interests, there are no registered lobbyists for any State in the Union.

Congress, as often happens, followed the lead of the majority of the States when it enacted a law concerning lobbying. One of the pioneers in the field was Wisconsin, which passed a comprehensive statute licensing lobbyists in the 1850's. Another pioneer in the field was Georgia, which passed a statute in 1878, as the result of the activity of carpetbaggers. Some 38 States and Alaska now have laws governing lobbies on their books.

Some congressional experts believe the whole progress of registering special interest groups would be much simpler if the odious word "lobby" and "lobbyist" were to be left out of the title of the act.

Reactions to that suggestion are as varied as human nature itself.

There was, for example, the college professor who was doing special work during the summer looking into legislation and drafting a bill for an economic group in a field in which he was a technical expert.

When, after consultation with the Department of Justice, he found he came under the Lobbying Act and would be required to register as a lobbyist, he threw up his well-paid job and exclaimed he just could not face his college classes as a registered lobbyist.

On the other hand, there was the dear Southern gentlewoman who timidly consulted the Department of Justice to find out how she could register as a lobbyist. She said she just knew if she could qualify under the law as a bona fide lobbyist, she could just make oodles of money and life would be quite simple.

She was advised that she might get her mother or father or some other relative to pay her $1 to represent her or his interests before the Congress and she was "in." She went away very happy, convinced that there is "gold in them hills," as indeed there is for many gay, glib glad-handing Washington representatives.

Barkley Fills Chaplain's Role In the Senate

By the United Press

Vice President Alben Barkley, who has filled a lot of roles in the Senate, found himself in a new one yesterday. He served temporarily as chaplain.

The Senate adjourned for 15 minutes in midafternoon to start a new "legislative day."

There wasn't time to summon the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, regular Senate chaplain. And the Senate never resumes deliberations after a formal adjournment without an opening prayer.

So Barkley offered this brief prayer:

"Lord, in these days of uncertainty, we ask for and thank Thee for the boon of Thy guidance and direction. Endow us with wisdom and light to see the path of our duty, and courage to keep our feet within it. Amen."

Mineral Oil Doses Called Dangerous

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 12. A Veterans Administration pathologist today warned Virginia doctors of what he termed a "hidden danger" of mineral oils taken as laxatives.

The oil, said Dr. Edgar Baron, is sometimes breathed into the lungs and causes lipoid pneumonia. This man-made pneumonia in turn may bring on recurrent attacks of bronchial pneumonia and death, he said.

Lung Activity Restricted

He pointed out that the bland oils are not immediately irritating to the lungs and consequently do not induce coughing spells, which would serve to warn physicians. But once the droplets get within the lungs they apparently stay there indefinitely, causing a slow development of fibrous tissues restricting lung activity.

He said such conditions seldom show up in X-rays and when they do are often misinterpreted as lung cancer.

He advised restricted use of mineral oil laxatives.

Lipoid pneumonia, Baron explained, was first classified in 1925 as a man-made disease caused by aspiration of oils in nose drops, vitamins and mineral oil laxatives.

In another session of today's scientific meetings, Dr. Donald S. Daniel, Richmond urologist, told of surgical treatment for removal of enlarged prostate glands, common ailment in men over 60. The surgery, retropibic prostatectomy, causes considerably less postoperative discomfort to the patients than other methods of major surgery for the condition, he said.

Dr. Caudill Installed

The conference was concluded today with installation of Dr. W. C. D. Caudill of Pearisburg as president for the ensuing year. He succeeds Dr. M. Pierce Rucker of Richmond, who was unable to attend the convention because of illness.

Dr. Caudill, a State Senator and hospital owner in Pearisburg, warned the assembled doctors that medicine's "most momentous problem" is the threat of Government-controlled medical care.

"Our best weapon against this," he declared, "is the early completion of our own system of prepayment medical care and hospitalization under the Blue Cross, Blue Shield, and commercial companies."

Doctor Tells Of Surgery In Epilepsy

Surgical treatment of psychomotor epilepsy, in which the victim becomes automatized and performs actions of which he has no later recollection, was described by Dr. Arthur A. Morris of the Georgetown University medical school last night.

Dr. Morris, who devised the surgical procedure about two years ago, told members of the Medical Society of the District meeting at 1718 M st. nw., how affected brain areas are first discovered by means of a "brain-wave" machine—the electroencephalogram.

These areas are then removed surgically. How five individual patients, all suffering from convulsive seizures and fits of automatism, were operated on successfully and now live normally was described in the lecture.

ECA Has 2 Big Problems, Hoffman Says

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Administrator Paul G. Hoffman of the Economic Cooperation Administration said tonight transatlantic relations never will be sound as long as Europe is a charity patient.

"Annoyances and tension will automatically evaporate when Europe is a cash-on-the-barrelhead purchaser and we are in the business of selling—not giving," he said in a speech prepared for the Association of National Advertisers, Inc.

He said there are two main problems facing the U. S. which ECA is trying to solve:

1. To help Europe increase her dollar earnings so that she will be able to buy and pay for her imports from us.

2. To set the stage while we still are in Europe so there can be a sharp advance in the standard of living when our aid ends in 1952.

Philip L. Graham, publisher of the Washington, D. C., Post, praised Hoffman's work in an address to the 1200 guests.

Graham tracer the economic background which led to the Marshall plan, and said the plan has now finished one phase of its work—restoring political stability to Europe. The next main problem, Graham said, is to bring about a higher standard of living for Europeans and make them self-supporting.

Nobel Peace Prize Goes to Lord Orr, Former FAO Head

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 12 (AP).—Lord Boyd Orr, former head of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, is the Nobel peace prize winner of 1949.

Boyd-Orr

The 69-year-old Scot has long campaigned for "a world food policy based on the needs of the people rather than on trade interests."

The prize amounts to 156,289.82 Norwegian kroner (21,889.30). It is awarded from a fund set up in 1896 by Alfred B. Nobel, the inventor of dynamite.

The recipient, the former Sir John Boyd Orr, announced in Dundee, Scotland, he would use the money to promote peace and world government.

He said he believed the prize was given him for his proposals for a world food plan.

Several Americans were considered for the prize, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

No peace prize was awarded last year. The 1947 prize went to the American Friends (Quakers) Service Committee and the Friends Service Council, London. Other Nobel prizes will be awarded in three weeks.

Lindley Confirmed To Succeed Minton

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Walter C. Lindley of Illinois to be a judge of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, succeeding Justice Sherman Minton of the Supreme Court.

John C. Pickett of Wyoming was confirmed as a judge of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, to fill a new position.

To replace Lindley as Federal judge for the Eastern District of Illinois, the Senate confirmed Casper Platt.

Ben C. Connally, son of Senator Connally (D., Tex.), and former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, were confirmed to be judges for the Southern District of Texas.

Hope for Many

Clot Deaths May Be Cut Through Test

New Orleans, Oct. 12 (AP).—A team of Tulane University surgeons today suggested the possibility of heading off potentially fatal blood clots by means of a "relatively simple" laboratory test.

They said the test offered promise of predicting, with a great deal of certainty, which patients are likely to develop blood clots following operation or as the result of certain other conditions like heart disease.

And they declared that for such patients there is some hope that the administration of a chemical that is naturally present in blood may help prevent the formation of clots.

Two Dangers from Clots

Clots are dangerous for two reasons. If they get big enough, they block a blood vessel, thus impeding the flow of blood, sometimes a big clot breaks loose. If it reaches a vital area, like the lung, it can cause death.

The Tulane surgeons also said there has been an increase in the number of cases of, and deaths from, blood clots of the veins in recent years. They advanced the theory this increase may be due to the almost routine use of so-called "antibiotic" drugs like penicillin. They explained such drugs—valuable in fighting germs—also tend to make the blood coagulate more easily, thus favoring the formation of clots.

Doctors Alton Ochsner, Michael E. Debakey and Paul T. Decamp made the report to the Thirteenth Congress of the International Society of Surgery.

Chemical Given by Mouth

They said studies had suggested that clotting in blood vessels may be due to a disbalance between blood substances that tend to make blood coagulate and those that tend to keep it fluid.

And they declared they had worked out a laboratory procedure capable of showing when such a disproportion exists.

The surgeons further related their studies had indicated that apparently a chemical called "alpha tocopherol phosphate"—a normal constituent of blood—is at least one of the factors responsible for preventing clot formation.

This chemical, they said, could be given by mouth to patients believed likely to have a clot. And the hope is, they concluded, that this or some other similarly working substance yet to be discovered might be used routinely in such cases.

Better Child Books Urged By Adventists

An all-out campaign to combat juvenile delinquency by widespread distribution of character-building books was urged last night by Seventh-Day Adventist Church publishing representatives in convention at Takoma Park, Md.

Led by Roy G. Campbell of Fort Worth, Tex., field literature sales directors and book and Bible house managers from 18 Eastern States appealed to publishing house boards to provide large editions of books that give guidance to growing boys and girls.

Parents and educators are "crying out" for this type of literature, Campbell said.

"The best way to combat trashy literature and the comic-book racket is with wholesome literature to catch the eye and hold the interest of our children," he said.

Dr. J. DeWitt Fox, editor of "Life and Health," Adventist magazine, told t he group that "printer's ink has prevented almost as much disease as doctors have cured. It has spread the right ideas of hygiene, opened windows, sent people out of doors, built hospitals and supported them."

The convention closed last night after three days of sessions in the Review and Herald publishing building.

Drive Is Launched to Raise $50,000 for Washington Cathedral Work

A drive to raise $50,000 in the Washington area for sustaining and building work of the Washington Cathedral was launched yesterday at a kick-off luncheon at the Mayflower.

The drive is part of a Nation-wide campaign to raise $375,000 for operating costs and further construction of the unfinished cathedral at Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves. nw.

A. Lloyd Symington, Washington attorney heading the drive in this area, presided at the luncheon and reported that more than 350 persons have volunteered to assist in this year's united drive for funds. More than 150 workers were at the luncheon.

Of the Washington area total of $50,000 the sum of $35,000 will be used for operating costs, and the remaining $15,000 for building work.

Loans Higher, Deposits Off In D. C. Banks

By S. Oliver Goodman

Loans of Washington banks have tended higher in the first nine months this year, while deposits have declined slightly.

This was indicated yesterday in a report by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, covering operations of 17 member Washington banks. Two local institutions are not Reserve members, so their figures are not included in the totals.

As of October 5, the Reserve Bank said, total loans of local banks amounted to $234,739,000. This was a modest increase of $5,330,000 as compared with the first week in January, but was considered significant because bank loans nationally have shown a sharp decrease in the same period.

Total deposits as of October 5 were $912,001,000, a drop of $16,705,000 for the first nine months this year. This was a decline of less than 2 per cent.

Capital accounts of the local institutions totaled $62,702,000 on the latest date, as compared with $60,645,000 at the start of the year.

Comparative figures for the 17 local banks follow:

	Week Ended October 5	Week Ended January 5
Total loans	$234,739,000	$229,409,000
Real estate loans	79,513,000	80,092,000
Total assets	979,051,000	993,549,000
Demand deposits	735,943,000	750,533,000
Time deposits	176,038,000	178,173,000
Gov't. deposits	20,284,000	14,872,000
Capital acc'ts.	62,702,000	60,645,000
Gov't bonds	312,265,000	315,262,000
Reserve with Fed. Reserve Bank	135,308,000	172,396,000

ANOTHER EXTRA: Directors of National Savings & Trust Co. have declared another extra dividend of $1 a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on capital stock, President Bruce Baird reported yesterday. Similar extras were paid in the first three quarters this year, making the total for this year $12 a share as compared with $10 a share in 1948. The latest dividends are both payable November 1 to stock of record October 21.

VISITOR: Washington photo equipment dealers yesterday understood better why Charles H. Percy at 30 is president of Bell & Howell Co., world's largest maker of precision motion picture equipment. Percy was here Tuesday for a dinner get-together at the Mayflower with regional dealers. In an informal talk to the dealers, Percy said: "We are here to help build sales for you and the city of Washington. Ideas mushroom in free discussion and create new ideas . . . It is important for the top management of Bell & Howell to get together and exchange merchandising and servicing ideas . . . with our dealers in their home territory."

POWER SALES: Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported a slight drop in September sales of electrical energy. Last month's output totaled 146,044,931 kilowatt hours, off 1,362,360 from the same 1948 month. The drop was caused by a shrinkage in power consumption by Capital Transit Co., which used 1,877,790 fewer kilowatt hours due to heavier use of buses. Pepco's system as a whole, including suburban areas, sold 175,886,876 kilowatt hours in September, a gain of 3,427,637 over the same 1948 month.

Strikes Hit Power Sales

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Output of electric energy dropped sharply in the week ended October 8, and for the first time this year fell below the corresponding 1948 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. The smaller distribution was attributed to effects of the steel and coal strikes.

Capital Airlines Buys First Three Constellations

Capital Airlines will add three Lockheed Constellations to its fleet next summer, President J. H. Carmichael announced here yesterday.

The new luxury airliners, which carry 56 passengers in pressurized cabins, have a top speed of more than 350 miles an hour and are air-conditioned and sound-proofed.

Acquisition of the Constellations follows the recently announced purchase of Douglas Super DC-3s. These additions will be to Capital's fleet of 23 DC-3s and 19 four-engined DC-4s, Carmichael said. The new purchases will be made on the pay-as-you-go equipment modernization plan.

Record Voltage Set For Ohio Power Line

Canton, Ohio, Oct. 12 (AP).—Ohio was marked today for a power line with a higher voltage than any now in use in this country.

Philip Sporn, president of the American Gas & Electric Co., said today the line will be strung across Ohio within the next two or three years.

Under present plans, Sporn reported, the power line will carry from 350,000 to 400,000 volts. It will run from Point Pleasant, W. Va., to the Columbus area, with two branches from there—one to Lima and another to the Indiana border.

The A. G. & E. is building the Sporn electric power plant at Point Pleasant—a 70-million-dollar project due to be completed in 1952. This plant will furnish power for the new line. A. G. & E., with headquarters in New York, is the parent firm of Ohio Power Co., and six other utility firms in a seven-State area.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT THE STEEL STRIKE IS ABOUT?

We are not sure, and we doubt if our employees are.

We had supposed it was because the union would not permit a worker to pay part of the cost of a welfare plan.

But that can't be it, for the C.I.O. has recently accepted welfare plans in automotive and other industries in which the worker does pay part of the cost. For example, they have joint plans with other employers for providing the various insurances such as life insurance, hospital benefits, etc., where the employee bears a substantial part of the cost.

They have also accepted pension plans where the employer deducts what the retired worker receives through social security. Since the man himself has contributed to social security, he obviously is paying part of his pension.

We also think joint plans are right, and are confident our plan is fair.

For example, the C.I.O. has contracts with other companies where the pension is $100 per month, including social security, after thirty years of service. At Inland it would amount to $147 per month, including social security, for the average worker.

Moreover, the C.I.O. has accepted plans where the man gets nothing unless he stays until retirement age. At Inland a man can always get out what he has put in, with interest. And, after five years, he can leave at any time and still have a partial pension at retirement, retaining what the company has paid in. This is called vesting, and we think it is right.

The trouble with the steel strike is simply that the C.I.O. is determined to establish a nation-wide steel pattern on their own terms. No offer, however fair, seems to be acceptable if it differs from their pattern.

Setting Vital, Teachers Told

Understanding of the components that make up a community is essential for the teacher participating in a program of life-adjustment education, Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the institute for research in social sciences at the University of North Carolina, yesterday told a conference of 200 of the Nation's leading educators.

Speaking at a work conference at the Federal Security Agency, Office of Education, he said that to understand students a teacher must understand their community setting.

He listed seven fields in which teachers, school officials and students should direct their attention.

Hearing Told of Beltsville Tuition Bills

Parents of 51 children who live on Government owned land at Beltsville, Md., have been billed for school tuition by Prince Georges County, an Agriculture Department spokesman yesterday told a congressional committee.

Frank H. Spencer, assistant director of the department's research branch, was one of a dozen witnesses before a House Labor and Education subcommittee holding hearings on a bill that would grant aid to communities in which schools have been overcrowded as a result of Federal activities.

Spencer said that the Agriculture Department controls 12,000 acres of tax-free land in the county.

Last year, for the first time the parents received tuition bills of $57 for elementary school children, and $85 for high school students. They have been billed again this year, Spencer said.

He told the committee that the county has not pressed collection. He explained that the Agriculture Department has no funds to meet the bills, and that parents, primarily service workers and animal handlers, cannot afford to pay. The county currently is trying to collect from the General Service Administration under provisions of a bill passed by this Congress. Funds have not yet been made available. They are included in a deficiency appropriation now before Congress.

House-Senate Group Agrees on Basing Point Bill

A House-Senate conference committee agreed yesterday on a bill that would make the so-called basing point system of pricing legal in the absence of any conspiracy to restrain trade.

Two members of the group, Representative Celler (D. N. Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Representative Willis (D., La.) did not sign the conference report.

Under the bill, manufacturers acting independently would be allowed to absorb freight charges and quote uniform delivered prices regardless of the distance goods are shipped.

The legislation is the outgrowth of recent court decisions outlawing some basing point price systems as restraints on trade.

It's Better Than 'Spring,' Anyway

By Richard L. Coe

THERE IS THE germ of originality about "Once Upon a Dream," at the Playhouse, but neither it nor the picture come off. In fact, this British arrival is a flat, dawdling comedy.

My recent unkind words about "Spring in Park Lane" prompted a flurry of protests suggesting that I had formed an alliance with a Chicago colonel. I was told, quite charmingly, that I go out of my way to be kindly disposed toward our native geniuses (California papers please copy), and that when a lesser import comes along I am painfully inhospitable.

Therefore, being a person of dangerously thin skin, I am a trifle timid about suggesting that for the third time in a row the Playhouse is giving us something less than an unmitigated delight.

The central figure of "Once Upon a Dream" is Googie Withers, a likable light comedienne, who plays the daft wife of a British officer soon to be discharged from occupying Germany. This lady has occupied her time by running a London fashion establishment sorely into debt, a debt which, presumably, can only be lifted by her husband's aunt, a wealthy dowager with a penchant for growing better roses.

Goodie's husband, played by Guy Middleton, has an enormously efficient batman, one of those personal aides who traditionally lend aid and comfort to the enemy's enemy. This trim chap, nattily acted by Griffith Jones, takes up his officer's offer for peacetime employment as butler-cook-handyman of a comfortable establishment. He arrives some weeks ahead of his master and proceeds to set the sloppily run cottage to rights.

Googie and her girl friend, who pops in and out sporadically to report on the shop's bankruptcy, think Grif quite a lad. Googie never does anything about this, but one night she dreams a romantic dream that's so convincing she orders her lackadaisical husband to fire Grif pronto.

This leads to matrimonial misunderstandings, with Grif getting fired a half dozen times, but always coming back for more. He enters Googie's rose in a flower show auntie was scheduled to win, but finally comes up with a logical solution for all.

While there's piquancy in outline, the story and characters are tediously developed and the situations over familiar. The cast battles but is quickly subdued by Patrick Kirwan's and Victor Katona's script.

If it's any comfort to my always welcome correspondents, I think this is a better try than "Spring in Park Lane" because it's not nearly so pretentious. However, it's still too restless-making. Never mind, "Passport to Pimlico" will be along soon.

"JOLSON SINGS AGAIN" arrives this morning at the Metropolitan and an elongated schedule is in order . . . The first of eight showings starts at 10 ayem, the last at 11:35 . . . Reports indicate that this successor to "The Jolson Story' is running close to the records of the first.

BALTIMORE? This week the Monument City has one playhouse open, Ford's, where Sam Levene and Glenn Anders are repeating their Broadway roles in Moss Hart's "Light Up the Sky" . . . The leading ladies are Hollywood's Lynn Bari, as the nervous actress, and Margie Hart, once of burlesque, as the skating wife of Producer Levene, who ties up her money in a perilous Boston tryout.

IT'S PRESTON STURGES Week at the Little, where two of that comedy master's hits are on: "The Great McGinty," that classic of political comedies, and "Sullivan's Travels," a spoof of Hollywood with Joel McCrea and Veronica Lake.

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY'S Ritchie Coliseum tonight blossomed out with a whirl . . . The Red Feather Musical Revue on behalf of the Prince Georges County Community Chest Fund.

THE FAIRLINGTON Players are reviving their recent sell-out "The Night of January 16th" at Bethesda Naval Hospital tomorrow night, with the jury drawn from the Navy audience . . . Kyda Dennis, Pete Holme, Joe Smith, Betty and Cliff Johnson and June Peterson are among those in Director Sue Evans' cast.

"ONCE UPON A DREAM" A GFD release, produced by J. Arthur Rank and Sydney Box, directed by Ralph Thomas, screen play by Patrick Kirwan and Victor Katona. At the Playhouse.

Housebreak Trap Snaps on Two in Store

A druggist's prescription for curing a rash of housebreakings proved bad medicine to two suspects early yesterday.

The druggist, William P. Weir, operator of the New Amsterdam Pharmacy, 2701 14th st. nw., had been plagued by a series of petty housebreak-pilferings from his store for several weeks.

Temporarily dropping pharmacology in favor of criminology, Weir reasoned that the store was being entered through a side door by means of a duplicate key, since there had been no evidence of force used.

To confirm this, a large case of facial tissue was placed against the door Monday night.

Next morning the carton had been moved and the store entered. On Tuesday night, Weir hurriedly deputized two soda fountain men, Austin H. Moody and Edward W. Lempke, and the three hid in the store after closing hours and waited for things to fizz.

Shortly after midnight, the door opened and two men entered.

They examined one cash register—empty. They walked to a second register. At this point Lempke strode forth from the prescription room, switched on the lights, and locked the door, trapping the intruders, as Weir and Moody joined him.

Police were called and took into custody Richard O. Brown, 25, of 1144 Kenilworth st. ne., and Walter L. Nickelson, 26, of 1744 S st. nw., both elevator operators in the building housing the pharmacy.

Police were told Brown, who reports to work at 10 p. m., had a key to the store for use in emergencies.

The suspects asserted to police that they had heard noises in the store and had entered to investigate.

Both men were held in $1000 bond each for the grand jury when arraigned in Municipal Court yesterday.

Warrantless Evidence Out

Judge Thomas D. Quinn yesterday suppressed as evidence numbers lottery slips seized by police in arresting a gaming suspect without a warrant.

The judge ruled that the police undercover men actually arrested the suspect, Leroy Stephens, 39, of 1505 4th st. nw., when they said to him, "Come over here, Leroy."

The officers said in Municipal Court they had an anonymous telephone tip that Stephens was a pickup man for a numbers group, and saw him September 7 getting out of a car with a bag in the 1500 block of 3d st. nw.

After calling to him, they asked: "What have you got in that bag, Leroy?"

They testified he replied, "You know what I got. I got numbers."

One of the officers said that he and Stephens were acquaintances.

Judge Quinn ruled that the arrest was affected when the officers called up Stephens, and that it was illegal because it was warrantless, and since no crime was being committed in the officers' presence and knowledge.

Therefore, according to the judge, the arrest was illegal, and any evidence received as a result of it likewise was invalid. Actual trial of the case still is pending.

PAUL ROBESON
world famous baritone
TONIGHT at 8:30 P. M.
TURNER'S ARENA (14th and W Sts. N.W.)
ADMISSION 50c (tax incl.)
With songs by BETTY SANDERS, New York Entertainer, and a discussion of discrimination in the Nation's Capital by local speakers.
WASHINGTON'S ANSWER TO PEEKSKILL
The voice of Paul Robeson will be heard in Washington on October 13. There are many of us who find ourselves in sharp disagreement with the position this great concert artist has taken on certain issues. But we are united in affirming his inalienable right to speak and sing to all who wish to hear him. This right to speak and listen is guaranteed under the Constitution of our country to all men, regardless of race, creed or color. It applies not only to Mr. Robeson but to his audience. No man will be compelled to attend Washington's Negro Freedom Rally, at which Robeson will sing and speak. But we appeal to the responsible law-enforcement authorities in the District of Columbia to insure that every person desiring to attend will be given the full protection of the law, and to the citizens of the District of Columbia to see that this community is not disgraced by the violence which attnded the Robeson concerts in Peekskill, New York. Vigorously and without qualification, we defend the right of Paul Robeson, whose voice has been heard in every land on earth, to sing and speak in the Nation's Capital.

German Radio Official Tells Burgman Role

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The inner workings of the Nazi propaganda machine were laid bare in District Court yesterday by a former top-flight German radio official testifying in the treason trial of Herbert Burgman.

Gerdt A. Wagner, wartime chief of the United States zone newsroom of the German radio, indicated that Goebbels himself ordered the broadcasts which were made by Burgman, former State Department employe charged with 20 overt acts of treason.

Burgman, a native-born American, was chief clerk of the military attache's office of the U. S. Embassy in Berlin at war's outbreak, but was not repatriated with other Embassy employes.

Wagner, a tall, gleaming-eyed man, faultlessly dressed in blue suit, bow tie and white lapel handkerchief, testified that he himself invented the station name "DEBUNK" and the alias "Joe Scanlon" under which Burgman broadcast.

Gave Orders to "Axis Sally"

A man who gave orders to "Axis Sally" among others, according to the prosecution, Wagner said he discussed the program idea with Burgman and that the latter "expressed willingness to work with us.

At the beginning, Wagner said, he wrote about half the programs and Burgman the other half, with Burgman writing the greater proportion as time went on. Burgman, he said, was the speaker.

The program purportedly originated in the United States Midwest but actually was short-waved from Berlin, Wagner said. He gave this testimony of discussions he said he and Burgman had regarding the line of the program:

They discussed "the possibility of using some anti-Nazi propaganda in order to increase credibility" but this was ruled out.

They discussed using an anti-Semitic line but decided not to "overdo" this since the source of the station might be given away.

They decided that the program "should have a very strong anti-British" slant "particularly since it came from the Middle West."

"We discussed having a policy similar to that of The Chicago Tribune," Wagner said.

"Anti-Communist" and "disruptive of the Allies" were two themes the program featured, Wagner said.

Burgman's salary, Wagner said, was 1500 reichsmarks a month—"equivalent to $600 but in "classification of income" corresponding roughly to $1000 a month.

Burgman, the witness testified, shared an office with Robert Best, since sentenced to life imprisonment on treason charges for broadcasting for Germany during the war.

"Burgman stated that in his opinion station DEBUNK was more effective than any other German propaganda," Wagner said.

George F. Kennan, now director of the State Department's policy planning staff and the first secretary of the United States Embassy in Berlin when the war started, testified that Burgman refused to join the American group for repatriation.

Too Sick to Leave

Similarly, Col. John R. Lovell, 4460 st. North, Arlington, testified that on December 14, 1941, he talked with Burgman on the telephone in Berlin and asked him "finally and firmly whether he was joining our group." He said he was not, Lovell said, that he was too sick to leave.

Criticism Held Chief Function Of Newsmen

Proper role of the newspaperman is that of a critic of government, Walter Trohan, chief of the Washington bureau of the Chicago Tribune, said yesterday.

Trohan was speaker at a Newspaper Week dinner of the Elks Lodge at which representatives of Washington area newspapers were guests. Special guest for the occasion was Peter Miller, treasurer of the Washington Times Herald.

Fraternization between newspapermen and public officials was criticized by the Tribune correspondent.

"The only way a newspaperman ought to look at a politician is 'down,'" Trohan asserted. He deplored "glorification" by newspapermen of "fatheads" in public service. He saw as a danger to journalistic independence the practice of newspaper publishers who visit the White House to get presidential support for pet projects.

Attacking the "New Deal," "the Fair Deal" and "the welfare state," Trohan said it was not enough for Americans to stand up and declare they are not members of the Communist Party. He said they ought to stand up and declare they are not Socialists either.

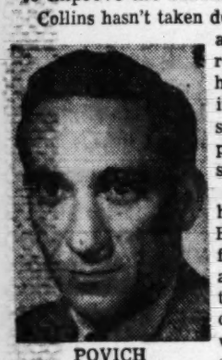
—With Shirley Povich

TED COLLINS, the man with a hobby, brings it to Griffith Stadium Sunday. Mr. Collins maintains the New York Bulldogs, a team in the National Football League. He is their angel, their support, undaunted after years of trying to improve the breed.

Collins hasn't taken down any ribbons yet in almost a decade as a fancier of pro football teams. His current product, which will meet the Redskins here Sunday, hasn't a victory to show for its efforts after three weeks of the NFL season. They are out of contention for competitive honors in the league before the season is a month old.



POVICH

For Collins, it has been an expensive hobby, with only the most meager returns. Before transplanting his team last fall from Boston, where it was unloved, unappreciated and virtually unattended by the fans, Collins dropped close to a million dollars. The greener fields that New York was supposed to offer, he hasn't yet discovered.

All that New York has done for Collins has been to separate him from more of his long green, which he earns copiously as the radio partner of the ample Kate Smith.

TO GET INTO NEW YORK originally, Collins had to buy in, and it cost him dearly to persuade the New York Giants to cede him some of their territorial rights in the NFL and share their park with the Bulldogs. The move took $250,000 of Collins' money, to be paid to the Giants' owners at the rate of 25 grand a year over the next 10 seasons.

It was an ill-timed move. New York wasn't even supporting the Giants with the crowds to which they had formerly been accustomed, and the Giants were losing money. Complicating the scene was the invasion of the New York pro field by the Yankees of the All-America Conference, who were also losing money, but splitting attendance to the NFL games to the point where everybody was getting hurt.

Right now, it's a mess in New York. Collins' Bulldogs, the comelatelies, got the worst of the dates, and ran smack into the World Series. In their first three home games, the Bulldogs drew only 31,000 fans, scarcely enough to pay the $20,000 per game guarantees to visiting clubs, let alone meeting his own payroll.

COLLINS WILL meet the payrolls, though. He doesn't quit easily, in fact not at all. He went out and hired himself a new coach, Charles Ewart, the old Yale who worked with Greasy Neale and the Eagles. Nobody has outbid Collins when he set his mind on a players, and despite the three lickings in the first three games, he has rounded up a fair football team.

If his coaches were as sharp in their business as Collins is as a producer, the Bulldogs would be doing all right. When they told him they needed a quarterback above all else this season, he went out and go not one but three—Bobby Layne, from the Bears; Johnny Rauch, the good one from Georgia's bowl teams, and Bob DeMoss, one of the best to come out of the rugged football in the Big Ten.

Even with a club that was costing him a lot of money, Collins wasn't deterred from signing Layne despite a $20,000-a-year contract he had to take over. He was convinced that on that score, at least, he wasn't sending good money after bad. The Bears didn't give up on Layne. With Johnny Lujack and Sid Luckman still around, he was merely superfluous.

AT GRIFFITH STADIUM on Sunday, Layne will be meeting up again with Harry Gilmer, the highly press-agented quarterback of the Redskins who hasn't quite justified his clippings. Layne and Gilmer have met before, specifically on New Year's Day, 1948, at New Orleans in the Sugar Bowl when Layne was quarterbacking Texas and Gilmer was operating the Alabama single wing.

It was no contest. Layne and Texas licked Alabama and Gilmer, 22 to 7, before 72,000. The hot individual duel didn't develop. It was all Layne, who completed 11 of 26 passes, threw one touchdown, raced to another, and was immediately swept down upon by the Bears' talent scouts, who offered a bonus for signing.

In contrast, Gilmer was having a bad day. Only 3 of the 11 passes he threw were completed. One was intercepted for a touchdown. A fumble by Gilmer set up another Texas touchdown. Eventually, Gilmer was credited with a touchdown pass, but I remember the details. It was a pass into the end zone, all right, but it was intercepted by Jim Canaday, who had the ball wrestled away from him by White of Alabama, happily for Gilmer.

USC vs. California, You Pick the Score

CALIFORNIA VS. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—Entrants have this tough tiebreaker to sweat out in the The Washington Post's football contest this week.

Both West Coast titans are unbeaten. The winner is practically certain to win the Pacific Coast Conference crown and the Rose Bowl bid. All you have to do is pick the score.

California has won four, romping over Wisconsin, 35-20. Southern California was held to a tie by its Big Ten opponent, Ohio State, after winning two.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major colleges games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the 21st game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

10,176 Flock to 'Skins' Colorful Clinic

HOT DOGS 'N EVERYTHING—A portion of the huge gathering which turned out last night for the Redskin Football Clinic is shown here, just at the moment a young feminine fan purchases "one with lots of mustard." Young and old alike enjoyed The Washington Post-sponsored affair, first of its kind, and proved their enthusiasm with continuous applause

Baugh, Band, Wismer Add To Fun for All

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Football and Washington's best brand of it proved their immense popularity again last night as the Redskin Football Clinic, the first of its kind ever staged here under the sponsorship of The Washington Post, took place before 10,176 eager spectators at Griffith Stadium.

One of the smallest fans in the huge throng, a 4-year-old with his parents and older sister, expressed his views with an enthusiastic: "Boy! This is the biggest night I've had in years."

An old-timer with white hair kept his bifocals glued on the field for 45 minutes without turning his head. In the stands were also such varied football students as Orrel Mitchell, the grid strategist from Georgetown Prep; hundreds of girls and boys seeing the Redskins in uniform for perhaps the first time; the complete squad from the University of Maryland with its coaching staff; players and their families from the boys' clubs, sandlots, high schools, and service installations nearby.

From the appearance of the Redskin Band, numbering 110 men, to the final whistle in a 105-pound game involving players of the Police Boys Club and the Boys Club of Washington there was never a dull moment. And the crowd greeted each new portion of the program with noisy approval.

Sammy Baugh, the Redskins' veteran passing star, again indicated the affection with which he's held in Washington. He brought down the house when he was introduced along with every other Redskin player.

Fans watched and listened breathlessly as Harry Wismer, the Sunday "Voice of The Redskins," interviewed Slingin' Sam and was given a demonstration of the lanky Texan's passing wizardry, how he holds the ball, how he finds his receivers.

There was terrific response, too, to Harry Gilmer's lengthy "jump" passes, one of which carried 70 yards in the air to Wingman Hal Crisler. Punting by Baugh and Dick Poillon, kickoffs by Jim Peebles and runbacks by Dan Sandifer were also popular.

The Redskins' head coach, Billick Whelchel, and Assistant Herman Ball and Wilbur Moore took the microphone right into the Redskins' huddle to let fans hear the signals called. Then the Redskins ran through slow motion plays with explanations of each by the coaches and Wismer.

Not an aspect of football was neglected, but even the Redskin players enjoyed the whole thing. With all its big-league setting it was the easiest workout they've had this year.

Braves Ask Waivers on Heath

Boston, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Boston Braves tonight asked waivers on veteran outfielder Jeff Heath "for purposes of giving him his unconditional release."

Heath, because he is a ten year man is under no compulsion to report to any club who might want to pick him up.

Augusta Signs Agreement With Nats

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 12. (AP).—The Augusta Tigers of the South Atlantic League signed a working agreement with the Washington Nats today.

The Agreement was signed at a conference between officials of the Augusta team and Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Lookouts. Chattanooga is the top link in the Washington chain.

Augusta, which becomes the first class A team in the system, will train with the class AA Lookouts at Winter Garden, Fla. next spring. Augusta had had an agreement with the New York Yankees since 1936.

Cards Keep Eddie Dyer

St. Louis, Oct. 12 (AP).—Eddie Dyer will be back as manager next year, but some player changes are in store for the St. Louis Cardinals if deals can be arranged.

Owner Fred Saigh, still smarting over the collapse of the Cardinals in the final week of the season that cost them the pennant, left no doubt about Dyer's status.

"I am completely satisfied with Dyer, and he will manage the Cardinals in 1950," Saigh said.

Although Dyer's two-year contract doesn't expire for another year, there had been some speculation that he might be replaced. The Cards lost out to Brooklyn in the pennant chase by the narrow margin of one game.

105-Pounder Mimics Gilmer, Jump-Passes for 2 Scores

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Harry Gilmer gave a demonstration of how to throw a jump pass in The Washington Post-Redskin clinic last night at Griffith Stadium, and 15 minutes later 105-pound Chris McCabe gave a perfect imitation.

Two of Chris' jump passes led the Eastern Branch Boys Club to a 27-6 win over No. 4 Police Boys Club in a 105-pound class game.

In the first game between 90-pound teams from the Georgetown Boys Club and No. 5 Police Boys Club, Gene Zavier plunged over from four yards out in perfect imitation of Pete Stout, as Georgetown won, 6-0.

The 105 pounders gave the crowd more of a thrill, however, with Eastern using a two platoon system and the complicated T formation and generally sparkling in their bright red and white uniforms.

Bobby Schaumbaum got No. 4 off in the lead with a 78-yard jaunt over right tackle that Eddie Saenz could well have been proud of. Eastern, however, evened the score as the half ended and came roaring back in the second half for 21 points.

No. 5 could well complain after the game that the 'Skins should have given them some lessons in pass defense. They had trouble all evening with McCabe's sharp tossing which set up one touchdown and accounted for two others. The fourth score came when Jack Frontfelder intercepted a pass and returned it 38 yards for the tally.

They All Let George Do It In Post's Football Contest

More than 10,000 entrants in The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners Contest last week let George do it.

Henry George, 1703 Q st. nw., had a little bit to do with it himself, picking 19 of 20 winners.

Only thing that prevented the 27-year-old unemployed aircraft draftsman from having a perfect day was the Southern California-Ohio State tie. He picked the Trojans.

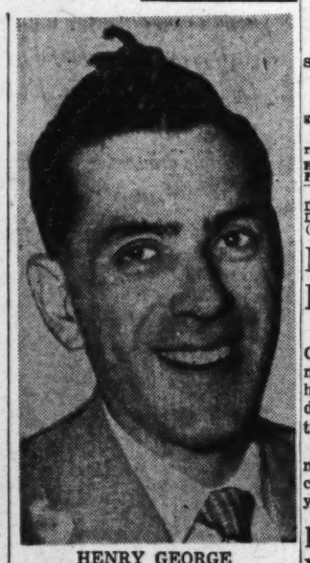
Even in the unnecessary tiebreaker, George showed sagacity. His score was: Oklahoma, 27; Texas, 14 (actually it was 20-14).

That tie game hurt a lot of real football experts—47 contestants had only two wrong.

George, a bachelor, started off by picking Georgetown to beat Wake Forrest and coolly hurdled the other upsets. He said he tagged Army to beat Michigan a couple of weeks ago. Navy was doubtful but he stuck along with the Middies. And he's glad.

Young Mr. George receives two all-expense trips to the Army-Navy classic at Philadelphia, Nov. 26, for his trouble. In addition, four ducats to the Redskin-Bulldog game here Sunday go to him.

Next week George can't do it.



HENRY GEORGE

As a winner, he's ineligible. If you haven't won, there's nothing stopping you from entering the fascinating contest of skill.

Editor Boxes Ez Charles

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP).—A California sports editor wanted to tell his readers what chance Pat Valentino had to beat NBA Champion Ezzard Charles in their title fight Friday night.

So he used the simplest method of finding out. He took them both on in the ring. No, not at the same time. He worked as a sparring partner in their respective camps without revealing he was a sports writer.

And Dave Bernonio, sports editor of the Vallejo Times Herald, came up with a surprising opinion.

"Charles is tough to hit," the 175-pound former high school football player and boxer reported, but "Valentino punches hard and is a much better risk than a 5 to 1 short ender."

Sports writers who don't think much of Bernonio's opinion can prove their point. Just take Valentino and Charles on in the ring.

Tebbett's Stars Win

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 12 (AP). Birdie Tebbetts' all-star baseball team opened a two-week barnstorming tour of New England today with an 8-2 victory over a Stamford nine composed of minor league and semi-pro players.

No Negligence In Ring Death

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Wayne County prosecutor's office said tonight no evidence of negligence has been uncovered in the ring death of Talmadge Bussey, Detroit lightweight boxer.

Bussey was knocked out Monday night by Luther Rawlings of Chicago. The 25-year-old Negro died yesterday.

Robinson All-Stars Win, 7-3, Before 3500

Newport News, Va., Oct. 12. (AP) Jackie Robinson's All-Stars opened a barnstorming tour of the South here today by defeating a group of Negro American League stars, 7-3,

NYU Could Surprise the Surprising Hoyas Friday

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown might figure in another upset tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium against NYU. Favored to win for the first time this season, the Hoyas could lose.

In three starts Georgetown has been from 12 to 21-point underdogs, yet it has won two.

Now the Hoyas are in the exact spot they found two of their victims. Holy Cross looked ahead to Brown and lost, 20-13. Wake Forest had thoughts only of North Carolina and Charley Justice, and was bumped, 12-6.

Next week, Georgetown plays its big rival, Boston College. It may not be paying strict attention to a Violet team that lost to Bucknell, 14-0, and beat Brooklyn College, 39-13.

However, the NYU veterans gave the Hoyas lots of troubles last year before succumbing, 13-6.

Word is that Edward E. (Hook) Mylin, one of the better coaches in football, has excellent, speedy backs. His line is weak, but it's backed up by sturdy Cocaptains Joe Novotny and Joe Rogoff.

NYU has five Negroes on its varsity. Billy Payne, leading groundgainer last season, is the star. George Starke is a classy end, and 205-pound Alan Hopewell will do at tackle. Two guards make up the quintet, Phil Cox and Soph Dick White.

Georgetown should remember Jack Fogarty. In the last two minutes he got off on a 94-yard gallop to the Hoya two to set up NYU's touchdown.

GW to Play Game a Year In Alexandria

Sometime this week, George Washington University expects to sign a five-year contract to play one football game a year at GW High Stadium in Alexandria.

The contract, was drawn by G. W. Athletic Director Max Farrington and explored favorably by the Alexandria School Board, early this week. The formality of signing is all which is left to be done.

It stipulates that GW be the first team each year to play a college game in Alexandria, and that the game be promoted by the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. Another D. C. college team, may also play one game a year in Alexandria, on Armistice Day.

GW plans to activate the contract by scheduling next September 30's game against VMI at GW High. The stadium now seats 10,500, but enlargement to 15,000 is planned for next year. If necessary, a further enlargement in 1951 to 18,600 is promised by the school board.

Catholic Drills For Randolph-Macon

A couple of rookies who didn't figure in Catholic University's football plans at the start of the season may play important roles in Saturday's game with Randolph-Macon at Brookland.

They are Jim Shoup, a guard, and Tony Pelerrosi, an end.

Reds Have 3 Manager Prospects

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 12 (AP).—Warren Giles, president of Cincinnati Reds, today mentioned Luke Sewell, Jewel Ens and Al Vincent as "possibilities" for managing the team next season.

Ens is manager of the Syracuse Chiefs in the International League and Vincent pilots Tulsa in the Texas League. Both are part of the Reds' organization.

And Luke Sewell, who managed the St. Louis Browns to a pennant in 1944 and was a Cincinnati coach this season,

DEAR FOLKS—The crowd got a laugh here the other day when it was announced over the P. A. system that To To Light "three pounds overweight" . . . curiosity killed the cat, so they say. A horse named Curiosity killed the favorite players in Wednesday's second race by beating A Lady, the choice . . . If you think Maryland had trouble with its racing dates this year, wait until 1950. A new trotting track near Baltimore will be added to the conglomeration. There's going to be a grand scramble and it looks like some flat racing track will have to conflict with the harness outfits. With betting falling off, looks as if somebody is going to get hurt . . . First steeplechase of the season on the Thursday program . . . See you on the rail. BILL.

Camargo 2d, Bebita Takes Third

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 12—Mother, carrying the colors of C. V. Whitney and the hopes of the favorites players, turned on the heat through the stretch today and won the Queen Isabella Handicap, an aptly-named feature for Columbus Day.

Before a gathering of 10,143 the daughter of Mahmound came into the finish line two lengths ahead of the closest opposition in the test for fillies and mares.

Mother was shipped in from New York along with Jockey Clarence Picou, last fall's Bowie sensation, for the event, and they teamed up to do the job impressively. The fans went to Mother like baby chicks to a hen and the gray mare returned a $3.40 mutual in her odds-on favorite role.

Christiana Stables' Camargo was second and three quarters of a length ahead of King Ranch's Bebita, teamed with Breckinridge Long's Loraine as the trainer W. J. Hirsch entry. Mrs. E. Dupont Weir's The Mater no relation to Mother was the only starter.

Mother who won her previous race last spring made it two victories in 18 tries for the year and took down $5605 to bring her 1949 earnings to $19,480. The S. E. Weitch-trained mare was clocked in 1:51 4-5 for the mile and a furlong, second fastest in the nine runnings and only the fraction over record time registered by Vargancy in 1942.

Owner Whitley, who watched the race and received the trophy from S. Bryce Wing, vice president of Laurel race course accounted for his second Queen Isebella, his Moonsoon having won the 1946 renewal.

Mother looked as if she were shooing her flock home in the opening stages, the mare trailing the field as the Mater set the pace ahead of Camargo, Bebita and Loraine.

Approaching the half pole, Picou began taking Mother to the outside as the Mater began to tire and Camargo went to the top. At the far turn Camargo had a wide lead but Mother had moved into second position.

In the stretch, Henri Mora, aboard Camargo went to the whip in an attempt to stave off the drive of Mother and Picou. However, the Whitneyite was not to be denied. She answered the command for speed and gradually wore down Camargo to be opening daylight at the wire.

Bebita rallied but her effort fell short of forcing Carmargo out of the place position. The Mater, a tired filly led only one rival into the finish line, Loraine.

The largest midweek crowd of the meeting thus far put $663,902 into the tote.

The daily double on the 8-and-3 combination returned a $58.60 mutuel. J. J. Hogan's Comely Belle took the first at $12.20 while handled by Jockey James Lynch, while R. S. Watts, jr.'s Curiosity accounted for the second at $12.60 with Jockey Bobby Martin up.

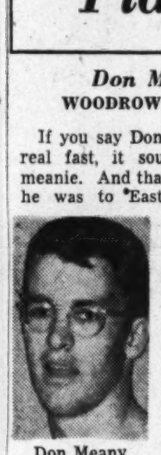
High—Prep Players of Week

Don Meany
WOODROW WILSON

If you say Don Meany's name real fast, it sounds like darn meanie. And that's exactly what he was to Eastern High last Friday.



Don Meany

Don plays a rugged tackle for Woodrow Wilson, and for his part in the Tigers' 34-13 upset of Eastern he is named the high school player of the week.

He had to go a long way to beat out teammate Leo Speros, who scored three times and passed for another touchdown. But if it hadn't been for Don, Leo wouldn't have gotten away for his 59-yard sprint.

It was Don who had to throw the key block. He took out Eastern's right tackle and right end, rolled over, got up, raced downfield, caught up with Speros, and knocked out Eastern's safety man.

That was typical of Don's brand of hustling last week. He started as a back at Wilson three years ago, and didn't like it too much when he was converted to tackle. But his attitude has changed and he is co-captain and the real field leader.

Meany is small for a tackle. He only packs 180 pounds on a 5 foot, 11-inch frame, but his Coach Joe Carlo insists he's about the best tackle around town.

"He's fast and smart and a natural leader," says Carlo. "Even if he is rather small he'll make some college club a good tackle or guard after he graduates in June."

Tommy Hunt
DEVITT PREP

Take a football team—any team, anywhere—and it's a good bet that our prep player of the week outgained it, all by himself, last Friday.

Tom Hunt

The selection is Tommy Hunt, Devitt Prep halfback, who ran and passed for 418 yards as the Destroyers tied Georgetown Prep, 12-12.

Hunt is one of the biggest halfbacks in the city at 6 feet, 2 inches and 195 pounds, and one of the fastest. And he's especially valuable to the Destroyers, who use both the single wing and T formation.

He's tailback, taking a direct pass from center when they're using the single wing, and he takes the quarterback's wide pitch-outs when they're moving from the T. He took one pitch-out last week, and flipped a 35-yard pass to Johnny Kelley, who ran 40 more for a touchdown. All together, he completed 11 out of 15 for 265 yards.

Running out of tailback, he reeled off runs of 60 and 63 yards, being pushed out of bounds on Georgetown's four-yard line both times. Tommy is also a fine punter, but with Devitt moving all over the field, he didn't get a chance to kick last week.

Hunt is only 17 years old and he graduates this June. Coach Bob Killen considers him the best halfback in the District schools. "He's a surefire college prospect if his next coach can get him to hit his books like he hits the line," says Killen.

Bell Finds Interhigh Tough Loop

Bell Vocational High is getting a rough initiation into Interhigh League football competition.

In the first game in its history two weeks ago, Bell was matched against the best running team in the league, McKinley Tech, and Tech romped off with a 52-0 victory.

Friday, in another mismatch, Bell makes its second start, and its opponent is defending champion Central.

In an effort to even up the game, Central Coach Lou Chacos may keep his star halfback Jimmy Pantos on the bench. Anyway, the Vikings are five touchdown favorites, and a good bet to tie Tech for the Group II lead. Pantos is having trouble with a sore shoulder.

Tech takes a vacation from Interhigh activity this week but keeps limber by traveling to Hagerstown, Md., High.

On Saturday, the Interhighs stage their first double-header in history with Coolidge taking on Roosevelt at 1 p. m., and Eastern meeting Anacostia right afterward at Central Stadium.

An important South Atlantic Conference game is lined up for Friday at 3:15 p. m. at Brooks Stadium. Armstrong Tech and Carver of Baltimore, both undefeated, meet head one.

So far Armstrong is batting 1.000 against Baltimore schools. The Techmen beat Dunbar, 19-0, and Douglas, 6-0. Carver holds a 7-6 win over Cardoza and a 12-0 win over Parker-Gray of Alexandria.

Among the standouts in Armstrong's backfield is Reggie Lee, the lad who drew rave notices last year with his spectacular passing and 70-yard punts at National Training School.

Tennessee's Co-Captain Ruled Ineligible

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 12 (AP). Fullback Ralph Chancey, co-captain of the University of Tennessee football team, was declared ineligible today.

Chancey played on the Tennessee team as a freshman in 1942 and was a member of the varsity squad for the last three years after returning from Army service.

N. W. Dougherty, chairman of the University Athletic Council, said he found that Chancey played as a freshman and had ruled him ineligible.

Williamson Says:

Tulane Picked to Turn Back Notre Dame If It Can Whip Psychology in Big Game

By Paul B. Williamson

The number one game of the week will find Notre Dame entertaining Tulane University Saturday at South Bend, Ind. "Entertaining" may be the wrong word.

The Williamson System, strictly following the figures that all Tulane has to beat is psychology.

This season, the System feels that a close analysis of the performance of these two giants in combat to date shows that Tulane's earned Williams rating of 97.8 reflects a touchdown or more advantage for the Greenies. Notre Dame's earned rating is 94.5.

The number two game of the week will be California over Southern California and that is against the System's early September ideas. Crowding this game close for number two should be Minnesota to shade Ohio State. Among other leading games of the week, watch Vanderbilt to take Florida, but an upset may be lurking somewhere behind the decimal points.

On the local scene Georgetown is favored for the first time this season in a Friday night clash with New York University. In Saturday games, George Washington gets the edge over V. P. I., Virginia is rated over Washington-Lee, and Navy gets the nod over Wisconsin.

VPI Has Troubles, Too

Colonials' Opponent Hasn't Won Since '47

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

IF YOU'RE FEELING sorry for George Washington's winless football team, save a little sympathy for the Colonials' Saturday opponent, Virginia Tech. The Gobblers are even worse off.

At least G. W. won four games last year, and has come close to winning in two of its three starts this fall.

But po'r ole Tech hasn't landed in the win column since 1947 when it beat Washington and Lee, 27-14. Since then, the Gobblers have lost 14 straight. They haven't come within three touchdowns of a tie in four games this season.

One guy who isn't wasting any sympathy on the Blacksburgers is G. W. Coach Bo Rowland.

"That's the kind of club that can up and lick you," he says. "Man for man, Tech has a good team. It's trouble is that it hasn't clicked like a team. That could happen most any time. Hope it doesn't happen this Saturday."

ROWLAND HAS seen the Gobblers play twice in the past two seasons, once when G. W. beat 'em, 13-0, last fall, and the other time, when powerful Quantico whipped 'em, 33-14, in the 1949 opener in Alexandria.

"That passer they have, Dick Goodman, is a real football player, don't anybody fool you," says Bo.

He must have gotten that impression from the Quantico game. He watched Goodman complete 15 out of 22 tosses for 155 yards, and one touchdown.

Goodman hasn't been quite that good since then, the Techmen having lost in subsequent games to Maryland, 34-7 William and Mary, 39-13, and Virginia, 36-0.

BUT HE'S STILL A man to be feared. He has a couple of better than average running mates in Sterling Wingo and Chip Collum. Wingo, Southern Conference sprint champ, was the loop's sophomore running sensation two years ago, but has tapered off.

Oren Hopkins and Ron Casto are Goodman's favorite pass targets, Hopkins catching touchdown passes against Quantico and Maryland. Casto was Tech's leading scorer last year. Jack Ittner, former all-state tackle, is now playing center, and Ralph Beard, the conference's prize fullback a couple of years ago, is holding down a tackle post, and placekicking when/after Teck scores.

Passer Goodman Worries Bo, Though

Tech also has one of the top punters in the State in Bob Gilley. In four games, he has a 40.9 yards average. Tech uses the T formation, and is coached by Bob McNeish.

Marlene Bauer Upsets Riley; Babe Ousted

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP).—Young Marlene Bauer's 19-hole victory over defending champion Polly Riley and elimination of Mrs. George (Babe) Zaharias, marked second round play in the women's Texas open golf tournament today.

Babe, who has won the event three times, also bowed out on the 19th hole—to Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill. Babe conceded the hole after failing to get on the green in three. Marjorie's second shot lay only 10 feet from the cup.

The 15-year-old Marlene found herself two down after nine holes to Polly. But the Long Beach, Calif., youngster rallied to take the next three holes to go 1 up over the Fort Worth entry.

Miss Riley pulled even on 15 and the two halved the next three holes. The end came suddenly. Marlene lofted her approach shot to within 7 feet of the pin while Polly was short. Miss Riley chipped short of the cup and Marlene preceded to run down her putt for the match.

Marlene faces Miss Lindsay tomorrow.

Kansas State champion Marilyn Smith moved ahead with a 3 and 1 victory over Marlene's 20-year-old sister, Alice. Marilyn's quarter-finals opponent will be another state champion, Betty MacKinnon, the Arkansas titlist who plays out of Mount Pleasant, Tex., Miss MacKinnon ousted Betty Jameson of San Antonio, 3 and 1.

Today's results included:
Patty Berg, Savage, Minn., defeated Helen Detweiler, Indio, Calif., 2-1; Beverly Hanson, Indio, Calif., defeated Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, 6-5; Mary Lena Faulk, Thomasville, Ga., defeated Mrs. Leon B. Hosek, Dallas, 6-3; Mrs. H. C. Riedel, Dallas, defeated Bettye Mims White, 9-7.

Minnesota's Tonnemaker Week's Lineman

Minneapolis, Oct. 12 (AP).—A young fellow whose keen football sense puts him in the opposing team's backfield quite a bit has been chosen as lineman of the week.

Named in the Associated Press' third pool of the season was Clayton Tonnemaker, Minnesota's burly center. Chief reason for his selection was his play in the Northwestern game last Saturday, won by Minnesota, 21-7.

"It was Tonnemaker who wrecked us in that first half," said Don Heap, assistant Northwestern coach. The Gophers led, 14-0, at half time.

Landon Jayvees Win

The Landon Jayvees edged out the St. James of Hagerstown junior varsity, 6-0, yesterday at Hagerstown. A 9-yard pass from Lee Derrick to John Dawson midway in the third quarter provided the only touchdown.

Asahel Abrams, 24-year-old senior fullback, formerly of Cardozo, has scored three times. Jim Broady, 138-pound sophomore halfback, has added 3 placements and Harry Thompson, senior center, has accounted for the remaining point on a placement.

Charley Ross, from Armstrong High, is playing his last year and has already tossed 3 touchdown passes.

President Signs Bill To Raise Salaries Of 17,000 VA Employes

The President yesterday signed into law the first major Federal pay raise bill of 1949.

The measure would raise the pay of 17,000 doctors, dentists and nurses in the Veterans Administration. In addition, its pay rates are likely to be extended to similar employes in Army and Navy hospitals.

Mr. Truman had grave doubts over some of the pay rates proposed in the bill. He sent a message to Congress recommending that pay scales in the classified pay bill be boosted for some employes to get them in line with the new VA scale. "It would be most unfortunate," he said, "if final action on these related pieces of legislation should result in any such discrepancies."

Meantime, Senate-House conferees on the classified bill have asked for suggestions on how it can be amended to compare favorably with the VA scale. The President is reported to have been disturbed over the $500-a-year pay boost given junior nurses and the 20-odd salaries over $10,000 for assistants to the VA medical chief.

D-DAY: This is the crucial day for both the classified and postal pay-reclassification bills. After a two-hour session yesterday, the 10 Senate-House conferees voted to meet again at 3 p. m. today and to stay in session until they reach agreements on both bills. At yesterday's session, they agreed:

1. To retain the present efficiency rating system temporarily, as proposed by the House, but the Civil Service Commission will be directed to recommend sweeping changes in it,

2. To accept the Senate provision to require each agency to set up committees to award supervisors and employes alike for outstanding work, and,

3. To accept the House grade structure, which means that Grades 6, 8, and 10 will be restored. These grades were wiped out by the Senate.

A compromise on the different salary scales was debated. The minimum starting salary is expected to be $2200 and the maximum $14,000. There are indications the conferees will recommend enactment of a postal bill that will be more liberal than the Senate measure.

JOB FIGHT: Senate and House leaders are engaged in a bitter behind-the-scene battle over 5500 temporary clerical jobs. As a result, those jobs may be located here after all. This is the story:

The President asked Congress to appropriate $875,000 to locate the jobs in Philadelphia as a part of his program to aid distressed economic areas. A subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, it was learned, has tentatively rejected the requst. Instead, it has proposed, for economy reasons, that Public Buildings Administration be given $3,800,000 to construct a new building to house the temporary workers at nearby Suitland, Md.

Word of the subcommittee action leaked back to the Senate and Pennsylvania's two Senators are reported to have threatend to upset the probable House action. Several other Senators are insisting that Census break up the proposed 5500-man clerical staff between Boston, Philadelphia and other cities hard-hit economically.

A year ago, it's recalled, the House voted to give PBA funds to construct a new building at Suitland for temporary Census workers. The Senate, however, overruled the House.

For the past six months Census and PBA have been trying to find space for the great mass of clerical workers who must be hired next spring to tabulate and analyze reports of next year's general census. At one time, Space was found here. Then came the President's order for the Philadelphia transfer, and the office space earmarked for Census was assigned to other agencies.

Now the Senate-House battle over the President's transfer order leaves Census exactly where it was a year ago. In Philadelphia, Census was to have been given office space now occupied by the Veterans Administration. VA balked at the order. Its officials said no other adequate office space was available in that city for its employes.

Census plans to have 3000 temporary clerical people at its Suitland headquarters in any event. If the House wins this battle, it will have upwards of 8500 there next year and a new building to put them in. PBA would use the new building to store Government records after Census moves out.

Both Parties Back District Crime Probe

Republican Members Of House Committee Predict Early Start

House District Committee members of both parties said yesterday they are prepared to join in backing the proposed investigation of Washington crime and law enforcement.

Flickers of discontent continued among Republican members who had not been consulted in advance. But these members indicated no disposition to oppose District Committee underwriting of the investigation, and they predicted a prompt beginning.

The District Committee meets at 11 a. m. today in executive session to set up the special subcommittee that will conduct the study under a House resolution.

Davis Slated to Be Head

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) sponsor of the investigation, is slated to head the subcommittee.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), who took the lead in clearing the resolution through the House, also may be a member.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) ranking minority member of the District committee, conferred informally with Davis about it yesterday. He, too, is expected to serve on the investigating subcommittee.

District Chairman McMillan (D., S.C.) said he was leaving it to Davis to prepare the lineup for the investigating subcommittee.

He said the lineup would be announced after the meeting.

The probe is to cover activities of the police, courts, prosecutor's office, and other law enforcement agencies.

Action Due on Judges

Davis said preliminary staff work will be done between now and January, with public hearings probable early next year.

In another move the House is slated to act today on a bill to add three judges to the 10 now serving in Municipal Court here.

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) predicted approval for the bill, but said there may be some opposition to the increase. He heads the District subcommittee that prepared the measure.

Senate action on a similar Municipal Court bill is slated with the next call of its calendar which may come today.

Railway Employe Missing for Days Found Dead in Bed

H. B. Haun, 53, claim agent for the Southern Railway System, was found dead in his Lorton, Va., home yesterday by Fairfax County police, who went there after Haun had not reported to work for several days and had not been seen otherwise.

Police said the body was on a bed and that Haun apparently had been dead for two or three days. His wife, it was said, had been away about a month on a trip. No evidence of violence was found. Dr. Nelson Podolnick, county coroner, said that although he had not completed investigation, it appeared Haun died of a heart attack.

In Suit's Retrial

Dry Eyes Get More Than Tears

What price tears?

Last January Mrs. Edward N. Janson, 49, of 2326 Military rd., Arlington, was awarded $9500 damages in a suit for injuries received in a 1947 automobile accident.

The verdict, according to her attorney, Wesley E. McDonald, was set aside by Judge Jennings Bailey as a "sympathy" verdict because she wept under cross examination.

After a retrial during which she didn't weep, a District Court jury yesterday awarded her $15,000 and awarded her husband another $5000 for loss of her services. The retrial was before Judge David A. Pine.

The verdict was against the Yellow Cab Co., of the District of Columbia. At the time of the accident, McDonald said, Mrs. Janson was a saleswoman in a dress salon.

She suffered permanent back and ankle injuries and lost her job because she couldn't stand for long periods of time, McDonald said.

Building Job Adds to 'Bugs' In Freeway

The Whitehurst Freeway completed its third day of operation yesterday with the official admission that all the "bugs" aren't out of it.

George Keneipp, Director of Vehicles and Traffic, estimated by next week traffic should flow more smoothly across the Key Bridge, and that adjustments in traffic lights and other measures at Washington Circle will clear up that "bug."

The trouble at Key Bridge, he explained, has been caused by some construction work at the Rosslyn Circle, just over the river in Virginia. This work is designed to broaden the roadway, and permit easier travel into and out of the circle. Keneipp said it was "unfortunate" the work had not been completed, but that he had been assured it would be done by week's end.

At Washington Circle, Keneipp said the trouble was harder to diagnose. Yesterday's peak hours brought some traffic back-up, Keneipp said, but he added adjustments are being made constantly to remedy this situation.

Meanwhile, operation of the freeway so far has borne out beliefs it would get largest use from Virginia motorists.

During Tuesday's afternoon peak, from 5 to 6 p. m. Keneipp said 1884 cars used the freeway, of which 1222 went into Virginia, the remainder to Canal rd.

During the October 11 24-hour period, 23,000 vehicles used the freeway, and Keneipp predicted this figure would mount as traffic problems along the roadway are eased.

Falls Church Acts to Clear Up Tax Snarl

Officials to Confer With Complaining Lawyers; Titles May Be Refused

Mayor Albert M. Orme of Falls Church last night agreed to a conference between city officials and area lawyers to try to clear up the city's allegedly faulty property-tax records.

Allen C. Adams, president of the Arlington County Bar Association, was one of 15 lawyers who complained about the records last night at a meeting of the Falls Church City Council.

Adams said his law firm had been charged $500 in back taxes after he previously had assured a client a parcel of Falls Church property was free of taxes.

Titles May Be Refused

He and the other lawyers present warned "nearly every major title company in Arlington and Falls Church will refuse to certify Falls Church properties" unless the situation is cleared up.

Immediate cause of the lawyers' complaints was a new drive to collect delinquent property taxes, some going back as far as 1929. The drive was launched by City Treasurer James E. Ferguson, who said so far it has netted $5000 in back taxes and penalties.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter, who is also city commissioner of revenue, said the city inherited the tax snarl from Fairfax County of which Falls Church was a part until it became a city a little over a year ago.

He said previous records had no index indicating what taxes were owed on property by previous owners. A new city tax map which will come out next year, Van Meter said, will have complete tax records cross-indexed.

Urges Stay on Back Taxes

"The town has given us misinformation, there's no question of that," charged Cary L. May, one of the complaining lawyers. He asked the city to withold further action on back taxes until January when lawyers can go to Fairfax Circuit Court and petition for relief.

Van Meter said the city has power to forgive penalties on back taxes but cannot forgive the taxes themselves.

The council last night postponed action on a proposed tightening of its ordinances governing explosives. The action was requested by Mayor Orme after a 10-year-old Falls Church youngster had three fingers blown off by an explosive-laden cap which disappeared from a jeep.

Van Meter asked for more time to work out an inventory system to be included in the revised ordinance which would allow builders to keep small supplies of explosives within city limits if proper precautions are taken.

Board Adopts Fees For Use Of Schools

A schedule of fees to be paid by community organizations using Arlington County school facilities was approved last night by the County School Board.

The board also approved testimony to be given today by Superintendent William A. Early before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Education and Labor studying the effect of Federal activities in Arlington on school problems.

The rates for use of school buildings adopted by the board are as follows:

For civic organizations, the cost of opening buildings—$6 for elementary schools, $8 for junior and senior high schools; for churches, $16 for large auditoriums, $11 for small auditoriums, and $1.50 for each classroom; for groups operating for profit, $30 for large and $15 for small auditoriums, and for political groups, the same rate.

In his testimony on Capitol Hill, Superintendent Early said he will show that one-seventh of taxable land in the county is now owned by the Federal Government. Of 15,000 children attending county schools, 6052 are children of Government workers.

These and other factors, he said, show that heavy Federal activity places an undue burden on the county because it decreases the tax base, due to the presence of much valuable tax-exempt land, while increasing the school population.

Bladensburg Policeman Found Semiconscious By Chauffeur

A Bladensburg town policeman who was off duty and out of uniform was found late last night in a semiconscious condition opposite the Bladensburg fire house in the 4700 block of Annapolis rd. He held a flashlight and carried a revolver.

Town, county and State police responded in eight vehicles when a passing truckdriver spotted the man in his headlights about 11:30 p. m. and told Bladensburg firemen he was dead. The policeman was lying beside a new roller skating rink across from the fire house.

Bladensburg Police Chief Henry J. Nebel removed the policeman in his car and said he would make no statement until he had completed an investigation.

Nebel did not identify the man except to say that he was on the Bladensburg police force and was not shot The man's revolver had an empty chamber but it was pointed out that some policemen make a practice of not keeping a bullet under the gun hammer.

HIS WORLDLY POSSESSIONS—A strange vehicle, which served Retlaw as a bed and contained his possessions, is hauled into Fourth Precinct Stationhouse. Police said Retlaw told them he had been living near the new Highway Bridge project, that he was going to push the vehicle to Florida, where he thinks the climate will be good for his stomach. It's been bothering him for 20 years. Police took him to Gallinger Hospital

D. C. Officials Urged to Aid Chest Drive

District government department and division heads were urged yesterday to take an active part in helping city workers attain a quota of $105,000 in the Community Chest campaign.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, who heads the city campaign, announced a drive meeting will be held Friday at 11 a. m. in the District Building, with 541 workers attending.

General Young reminded the 50 city officials at yesterday's session in the District Building that last year the city government reached only 78 per cent of its quota. "I hope we will do better this year," he said.

Young warned the department heads: "We won't get to first base without leadership from our bosses—not just your blessing. It will be necessary to take an active interest and meet with the campaign workers from time to time—show an interest in the drive's progress.

"There is a tendency for people to close their eyes to real need, but if people are approached they will contribute," he stated.

The meeting Friday will be addressed by Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, head of the United States Government campaign division; Frank J. Luchs, general campaign chairman, and William Gilks, manager of the Government unit of the Chest. The talks will be followed by a film on Red Feather activities.

General Young has appointed Francis L. Timmons, jr., chief clerk in the Engineer's Department, and Emil A. Press, engineer in the Department of Sanitary Engineering, to assist him in the city drive.

Legal Mixup

Writ Stops Wife's Suit For Divorce

A 25-year-old telephone operator was enjoined in District Court here yesterday from pressing a divorce suit against her husband in Maryland.

At issue is the question whether the Washington or Maryland court has jurisdiction in divorce cases where the estranged spouses claim residence on opposite side of the District Line.

The husband who obtained the injunction is Lawrence I. Crotinger, jr., of 4551 Wheeler rd. se., which is in Prince Georges County. He filed his divorce suit in Washington in July, 1948, and alleged adultery.

The enjoined wife is Stella S. Crotinger, of 1831 Irving st. nw. She filed a counterclaim here charging cruelty and later in Maryland sued for divorce on the grounds of desertion.

In granting the injunction, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut said that the case will probably turn on which court has jurisdiction.

The husband has legal custody of the Crotingers' 3-year-old daughter, Ruby. The child is being cared for by Crotinger's parents in Maryland.

Alumni Plan Picnic

Iowa State College Alumni Association of Greater Washington will hold its annual picnic at the Palisades Recreation Center, Sherrier pl. and Edmunds st. nw. from 4 to 9 p. m. Saturday. A picnic lunch, motion pictures and games are on the program.

Playground Segregation Reported Less

The District Recreation Board yesterday reported progress during the past fiscal year in easing existing segregation policies on public facilities.

In its annual report to the District Commissioners, the board noted it inherited a "segregated system," but that during the past year it has adopted a policy of removing the segregation in public recreation "in such sequence and at such rate of progression, as may be consistent with the public interest, public order and effective administration."

During the past year, tennis courts in Federal parks were made unsegregated and the American Friends Service Committee was authorized to operate the Rose Park and Garfield Park playgrounds on an interracial basis as an experiment.

The report concluded, "The board remains alert to changing attitudes in the community and there will from time to time undoubtedly be further modifications of the policy of segregation."

During the year, attendance at public recreation programs increased 16.3 percent over the previous year. A total of 162 units attracted a total attendance of 13,838,265. More than 71,000 of these were for swimming instruction.

Low salaries still handicap recreation work. "The discrepancy between salaries of Federal and District employes has made the personnel problem difficult. Qualified recreation leadership can command elsewhere higher salaries than the department is able to pay."

Hundreds Offer Help In Preparing Sesqui Show

Tardy Approval By Congress May Delay Freedom Fair Feature

The National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, needing only President Truman's signature to receive three million dollars appropriated by Congress, was deluged yesterday with offers of assistance in putting on its show.

Edward Boykin, director of the commission, said "at least 100 persons" had called or visited him in hopes of getting in on the ground floor of the 17-million-dollar project.

The celebration's Freedom Fair, which officials originally hoped would be ready for opening by next July 4, may be delayed several weeks because of tardy congressional approval, Boykin said. Ground-breaking is scheduled for February 1.

The main theme of the observance of the city's 150th birthday will go ahead on April 15, 1950, however.

Building Plans Rushed

Meanwhile, the commission rushed plans for buildings on the 114-acre Freedom Fair site at the east end of E. Capitol st. on the shore of Kingman Lake.

Three buildings shaped in a pattern of the letters "U.S.A." and covering 400,000 square feet will be dedicated to the part played by labor and industry in the growth of America.

Carter Barron, executive vice chairman of the commission, said 12 million dollars may be realized in two full seasons by renting exhibit space for $30 per square foot—enough to finance the entire building program.

He said that the commission is now at the stage it should have been two years ago, if the "best possible job is to be done."

Voluntary So Far

Up to this point, all work on the project has been of a "purely voluntary nature," Barron said. And hereafter, he added, those who have contributed time and effort to make the planning phase a success will receive first consideration.

Paul Green, author of the symphonic dramas, "Lost Colony" and "The Common Glory," is half-way through his work for the celebration here, to be staged in an amphitheater in Rock Creek Park. Present plans call for a site at 16th st. and Colorado ave. nw.

Green, whose work will be based on the life of George Washington, will be in Washington next week to confer with officials on plans for the amphitheater.

The commission will meet with the Fine Arts Commission at 10 a. m. Monday to consider building plans for the Freedom Fair, Boykin said yesterday.

$2700 Jewel Theft Traced to 2 in Jail, Police Report

Alexandria police yesterday reported they have traced a $2700 jewel theft August 30 to two youths now serving prison sentences in Petersburg, Va., for interstate transportation of a stolen car.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes said detaining warrants charging burglary have been issued for Lievis DePoorter, 18, and Leon Myers, 22, both of Washington and each serving an 18-month term at Petersburg.

Hawes said he had information that DePoorter took the loot from the apartment of Lieut. Co. S. W. Roth at 916 Manor rd., Alexandria, and that Myers helped him dispose of it. Nearly $1000 worth of the stolen jewelry has been recovered in second-hand stores in Washington and Arlington, Hawes said.

Man Hits Bullseye but Misses Heart

After aiming five shots at a target in a 9th st. shooting gallery yesterday, a 26-year-old steelworker shot himself in the left shoulder and later told police he was sorry he didnt do a better job.

He is Don Harrell of 935 H st. nw. Police found a note in his room which stated he was tired of living. Homicide investigators said Harrell had been having domestic difficulties. His wife, Mrs. Mary Harrell, lives in Brandywine, Md.

Casualty Hospital doctors found the bullet lodged in Harrell's upper back. They said his condition was "good."

Drank Glass of Beer First

At about 3:30 yesterday afternoon Harrell walked into the American Restaurant at 407 9th st. nw. and was served a glass of beer by waitress Gloria Ellis, 24.

When he drank up, Miss Ellis said, he got up and walked across the street to the Marlin Amusement Corp. shooting gallery at 412 9th st. nw.

At the shooting gallery, Harrell purchased six shots with a .22 caliber pistol from attendant George Price, 25. Price turned to load another gun but noticed that Harrell put two out of five bullets into the target bullseye.

As he turned back, Price said he heard the last hsot go off. The gun was pointed at Harrell's shoulder.

Bystanders said Harrell tumbled to the floor, laid there for a couple of minutes, then got up and walked back across the street to the American Restaurant.

When queried about what happened by one of the patrons, Harrell reportedly said, "Down in Texas, when I want to shoot myself, it's my business."

President Leads the Nation In Columbus Day Observances

President Truman yesterday led the Nation's observance of Columbus Day by calling on the Americas "to help one another in the efforts of each to help himself."

Speaking to the ambassadors to the Council of the Organization of American States, President Truman declared:

"We in the Inter-American system subscribe fully to the principle of nonintervention in the internal or external affairs of any American republic. At the same time, we are definitely committed to the proposition that our solidarity and high aims are fostered by the exercise of representative democracy in the American states."

"Fitting Opportunity"

President Truman pointed out that Columbus Day "provides a fitting opportunity" to meet with the ambassadors and added:

"We have demonstrated how much can be accomplished when nations temper their national aspirations with concern for the interests of all. This is evident in the work of the American republics for economic and social development.

"With increasing emphasis, we are striving to make possible a better life not only for people today, but for generations still unborn. Our desire for security, in fact, is not primarily in order that our lives may remain unchanged, but that we may progressively realize our vast possibilities."

K. of C. Outlines Aims

Locally, the day's observance was highlighted by a number of wreath-layings at the Columbus monument at Union Station. In addition, in a broadcast over radio station WMAL, representatives of the Knights of Columbus outlined aims and accomplishments of their organization, named for the explorer.

Among speakers were George Morris Fay, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, John E. Lynch, grand knight, Judge Edward M. Curra of District Court, and James E. Colliflower.

Mrs. Stainback Dies; Wife Of Governor

St. Louis, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Mrs. Cecile Stainback, wife of Gov. Ingram M. Stainback of Hawaii, died tonight in Missouri Baptist Hospital following an operation for a brain tumor.

Mrs. Stainback

Mrs. Stainback was operated upon by Dr. Roland M. Klemme, world-famous brain surgeon, earlier in the day. Klemme said she failed to respond to post-operative treatment and died this evening.

She had come here Friday and entered the hospital that day in preparation for the operation.

Governor Stainback had been prevented from accompanying his wife here because of a governmental emergency arising from the CIO longshoremen's strike against Hawaiian docks. The strike was settled last week.

Mrs. Stainback, the former Cecile B. White, was married to Stainback in May of 1922, when he had a law practice that led, eventually, to the territorial governorship.

[Mrs. Stainback visited Washington with her husband in November, 1943, and July, 1948, when they stayed at the Mayflower. She was entertained widely by Government and diplomatic officials. One of the highlights of her earlier stay was a visit with women Marines at Arlington Annex, where she was the luncheon guest of Major Ruth Cheney Streeter before touring the barracks.]

Minnesota Farm Her Background

Mrs. Anderson's Political Rise Swift

By Kathryn Gorman

IT IS a long way from a simple Iowa parsonage to the United States Embassy in Copenhagen, but an alert, 40-year-old Minnesota woman has made it.

She is Mrs. Eugenie Moore Anderson of Red Wing, Minn., and although she did not know it at the time, every step she has taken along the route to Denmark, where she will be the second woman representing the United States Government, has prepared and seasoned her for her new job.

Mrs. Anderson will have the title of Ambassador to Denmark. Her only feminine predecessor, Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, the daughter of William Jennings Bryan, was Minister to Denmark.

Lives on 400 Acre Farm

If Mrs. Anderson, who lives on a 400-acre Mississippi River valley farm with her 42-year-old husband and her two children, Johanna, 14, and Hans, 11, had been satisfied to write to her Congressman when she did not see eye to eye with him, she probably would not be preparing to go to Copenhagen now.

Instead of dispatching a letter to Washington, she jumped into active party politics in 1944. Her intense interest and her hours of work—she drove thousands of miles for hundreds of meetings—led to her being elected Democratic National Committeewoman for Minnesota.

But she began on the bottom rung of the ladder of party politics. In 1944 she attended a precinct caucus in Red Wing and was elected county chairwoman—and she kept on working. Then she was elected a delegate to the State convention at which the D-FL party was born. In 1946 she was elected State vice-chairman. During the 1948 Presidential campaign she was on the Presidential train when it traveled through Minnesota. She is not a personal friend of the Truman family although she has met the President, Mrs. Truman and Margaret.

Father a Minister

THE story of how Mrs. Anderson was prepared to put her foot on the political ladder began about 30 years ago in a small town parsonage in Iowa. She was one of five children and her father, Rev. E. A. Moore, was a Methodist minister whose interests extended beyond those of his church and his community. He was a graduate of the University of Nebraska and the Boston Theological Seminary. Her mother, the former Flora McMillen, was a graduate of Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Iowa, and was considered an excellent public speaker. She used this talent in her church work with women's groups.

But as the five Moore children sat around a dining-room table, they heard conversation and comment that stimulated their intellectual curiosity. They were all lively intellectually but at that time the 10-year-old Eugenie was most interested in music.

She listened to discussion of the topics of the times: the Paris Peace conference, Woodrow Wilson, the return of soldiers from World War I and the United States they found, prohibition, the League of Nations, isolationism and immigration.

Student of Music

SHE WAS born in Adair, Iowa, and then with the family lived in Shelby, Dexter, Corning, Clarinda and Des Moines, all in Iowa. When she was of college age, she was enrolled in Carlton College, Northfield, Minn. Her major was music and her minor philosophy.

The did not finish college but married John Pierce Anderson, son of the late Dr. Alexander P. Anderson, nationally known scientist and philanthropist and discoverer of the process for the manufacture of puffed grain cereals, at the end of the third year. She and her husband then lived in New York for two years where she studied music.

She met her husband when she visited at the home of his sister, the Andersons' handsome combination farm house and laboratories called Tower View in Burnside Township, Minn. It is on this same land that Eugenie Anderson and her family live now.

Their home is a gray, frame dwelling of some 12 rooms. It is set back from the highway about a city block deeper into the farm than the original house where another member of the Anderson family lives.

Plainly Decorated

THE house, to which Mrs. Anderson tried to return every day in time for dinner or an evening chat even during the height of campaigning, is decorated in plain, modern furniture. The colors used most frequently are blue and gray and Mrs. Anderson's piano, now used for the most part by her daughter, stands in a room that opens off the main living room.

While the 400 acres is made up of hills along the Mississippi and lovely woods, a good part of it is farmed by tractor. John Anderson manages the farm and has a workshop studio near the house.

Mrs. Anderson has dark brown hair which waves across her head. Her eyes are blue-gray and she is slender. She has household help when she is particularly busy but when she has time she and her daughter, Johanna, enjoy having the roomy house to themselves.

She drives her own car and says that since her children are older she finds she spends a good deal of time as chauffeur. She not only makes frequent trips to the Twin Cities, about 45 miles away, but she drives the children to and from the consolidated school they attend and where she has been supervisor of the school lunch program. She also takes them to their 4-H club meetings (where Johanna has learned to sew and bake bread). She hauls the groceries from Red Wing, five miles away from her farm home.

MRS. EUGENIE MOORE ANDERSON
. . . first feminine U. S. Ambassador

Knows Everyone

MRS. ANDERSON knows everyone in her township and in the locality surrounding it. Because it is largely Scandinavian, she has been greeted during the past few weeks with such salutations as: "We're coming to visit you in Copenhagen. We haven't been back to the old country in years."

Mrs. Anderson was the first woman member of the local school board and, while there was some opposition to the idea at first, everything worked out all right.

She visited Europe in 1937 but did not go to any of the Scandinavian countries or to England. Her husband was unable to go at that time and she felt that there would be war. She was determined to see some Van Gogh paintings and to hear some music in Austria. She went alone and visited France, Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Holland. She was gone two months and conditions in Europe set her to thinking seriously about social problems.

In Copenhagen the official embassy is undergoing repairs, she has heard, and she is not certain that it will be ready for occupancy in the near future. The embassy is a 15-room house. The embassy offices are in an office building in Copenhagen's business section.

She has been warned to take at least one year's supply of clothing for her family with her because clothes are still difficult to obtain in Denmark. Preliminary to her appointment, however, she made no preparations. "The only thing I've done," she laughed, "is to look at a good warm suit. I hear it is cold and rainy in Denmark in the early winter and late fall."

Entertains Simply

IN HER farm home she entertains her friends simply and with little formality. During recent years she has given up ordinary social life because "otherwise I would not see my family at all."

In Copenhagen her children will attend a Danish public school rather than an English one because she believes that the experience will be more interesting to them. Both the children are good students and have all the busy, normal interests of youngsters of their ages. Johanna is a little uneasy about leaving the friends she has made in high school, but Hans is anxious to go to Denmark. He wants to go by plane with his father if things work out that way.

Mrs. Anderson is of Scotch and English descent; her husband of Scandinavian ancestry. Her husband, who was a student at the University of Chicago and the Yale Art School, is interested in politics only theoretically.

Of Mrs. Anderson's three sisters, only two were Phi Beta Kappas. Her only brother is a doctor. The sisters are Mrs. Charles Biederman of Red Wing, Mrs. Allan J. Stanley of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. William E. Ross of Des Moines, Iowa. Her brother is Dr. William J. Moore of Grants Pass, Oreg.

Mrs. Anderson says that she is going to Denmark with the idea that one of her most important functions will be to explain America's foreign policy and the feeling this country has for other countries.

After she gets back from Denmark?

She intends to go right on working in local, county, State, national and international politics. "Only the participation of average citizens in political parties will keep democracy safe," she said.

Mary Haworth's Mail

At Age 23, Girl Was Pursued By Married Man Who Has Dominated Her Life Ever Since; Now She Is Past 40 and He, After Wife Died, Wed Another

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am past 40 now, but when I was 23 I was pursued by a married man in my office, who gave the usual story about his misfortune in being married to the wrong woman. They had four children.

Through the years I tried very hard to put him out of my life, but to no avail, and about 10 years ago his wife died. Of course it was understood that we would be married eventually, but his children were then involved and he had all sorts of excuses for not marrying again.

Having a very good position myself, I didn't urge marriage too much, not wishing to have his children live with us. But they are all married now. Although he has been dating me as usual and telephoning nearly every day, at the office or at home, he recently married another woman,—and he had never even hinted to me that this was going on.

Second Marriage Came as a Shock

SINCE THIS happened many things have been brought to light by my friends about how deceptive he has been. What a fool I was to believe in him all these years, giving up my desirable chances at marriage,—chances that he took care to break up, saying he would marry me; and we were lovers from time to time.

I would like to know, isn't there some way I could make him support me? My present health isn't very good and it may be that I will need some support soon. This man, I'll call him Dean, has managed to gain some standing in his company and earns a good salary; and he is about 55 years old.

In closing I wish to say to any young girl reading this pathetic tale—please stay away from any married man, no matter what his story is. They are all the same; for goodness sake don't trust them at any time. S. N.

Woman Conspired in Cheating Self

DEAR S. N.: Taking a technical view of the matter, you were past the age of consent when you let yourself become entangled in Dean's web of deceit, knowing that he was a married man.

Thus, though it may be a fact that he was the aggressor who played unscrupulously upon your feelings, hopes and naivete to corral and keep you as a conquest, nevertheless the history of the association has been that you cooperated with him in cheating his wife of perquisites that legally or morally were exclusively hers, according to ordinary standards of human decency.

Therefore, though it may be a dizzying shock to discover, at long last, that you were being even worse cheated than she, in the illicit relationship which cheated her, I hardly think you could qualify as an injured innocent in your dealings with Dean, or as a legitimate plaintiff for financial support to compensate for damages incurred in throwing yourself away on him.

Growth Depends on Seeing Truth

HOWEVER, I am not proffering a counsel of despair. Rather I think it necessary to face social realities, in order to reorganize your life along more profitable lines. If you are newly forty, you have another decade of prime youth ahead of you yet, according to modern reckoning,—as witness the fact that persons of distinction mentioned in the news are invariably called "young" if in their forties.

Figuratively speaking you are bankrupt of security at this time, due to unethical traffic with an utterly selfish hypocrite, and the obvious remedies are: 1. Stop throwing personal capital down the drain, by breaking flatly with Dean and wasting no more time or energy on him. 2. Use the vitality thus saved to cultivate and expand your chief durable asset, namely, your honest friendships.

As you expunge from your life this futile relationship which is a critical source of frustration and pessimism, your moral and physical health will mend; and as you begin to confidently feel that you are worthy of fine devotion, that is the kind of experience you will attract. M. H.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

IT TOOK 1439 years to make this picture. That's how many years of living these members of the Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church have done. Supervising the cutting of the cake at a party given yesterday for "elder sisters" of the church are (sitting, left to right) Miss Mary Widmayer, 82; Mrs. Paul Menzel, widow of former minister at Concordia, 84; Mrs. Hulda Coomes, 85; Mrs. Mary Stein, 88, and her junior by two weeks, Mrs. George Brandt, also 88; Mrs. John Bender, 81; Mrs. Amelia Grass, 79, and Mrs. Selma Kohne, 83. Standing in back (left to right) are Mrs. Anna E. Gotthardt, 78; Mrs. Edward Briscoe, 75; Mrs. Fred Schultz, 78; Mrs. M. C. Kloeppinger, 80; Miss Elise Kettler, 76; Mrs. Meta Klausman, 69; Miss M. Conradis, 80; Mrs. Jacob Yagle, 77; Mrs. Louise Clifford, 79, and Mrs. John J. Kolb, 77

Youngster of 69 Crashes Gate

Concordia 'Girls', 75-Plus, Have Gay Party

By Sonia Stein

A YOUNGSTER of 69 crashed the party yesterday afternoon. And you can't blame her. Because it was a gay party with the very best silver services brought out for the occasion and bouquets of baby chrysanthemums blossoming on every stable.

The party—an ice cream and cake affair—was held at Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church at 20th and G sts. nw., for the ladies of the congregation who have passed the three quarter century mark.

And if they weren't within the holy confines of the church, you'd suspect some of them of exaggerated about their ages—they were so young and sprightly.

They laughed like teenagers when someone sang, "You don't know what you're missin' if you've never had no kissin'; it's an absolute necessity." And when the photographer wanted to snap their picture, they straightened their bonnets (very gay ones, too) and tucked their hair in place.

Some Were Vain

THESE members of the church are referred to as "elder sisters" lest they feel the others consider them old. But even so there were a few among the 31 members of the church who qualify to attend the 75ers party, who declined the invitation out of vanity. "I think," said the wife of the Rev. Charles Enders, "that quite a few of them just didn't want to admit they were old enough."

That's why when Mrs. Enders discovered that 69-year-old Mrs. Meta Klausman had been accidentally invited and was perfectly willing to join the "elder sisters," she was delighted to include her.

The hostesses at the party, members of the Ladies Aid Society, baked cookies and cakes for the occasion, and bought corsages of tiny orchid chrysanthemums for each of the honored guests.

The only man there was Dr. Enders, since it was purely a "hen party."

'Clam Up' on Histories

LIKE many people who have lived full, rich lives, they were shy about talking about their pasts. One woman of 80 insisted "I don't do anything and I never have." (Others say that all of the "elder sisters" are strong supporters of mission work.)

Many of them were christened, confirmed and married at the church. Several of them who came from Germany remember that they attended this church the very first Sunday they were in America.

Mrs. Hulda Coomes recalls that her father, Frederick Imhof, started the infants' Sunday school class, and that she entered the class when she was six. "Now I'm almost 86," she says. And then, with a smile she continues, "I shouldn't say that. Dr. Enders tells me I'm 85 until I'm 86."

Miss Mary Widmayer, who served as an officer in the Ladies Aid Society for 25 years, is not—at 82—too old to get a kick out of making people raise an eyebrow. "I'm a maiden lady but I raised a family of three children," she says with a grin. "They were my sister's youngsters." She had had the experience of growing up with only one parent, since her father was killed when she was a child.

Penetrated to Harems

THE MOST exotic life of all has surely been led by Miss Elise Kettler who spent 20 of her 76 years as a missionary in India. "I worked among the Zenana women, the secluded women of India," she says. "We'd tell them we'd teach them to crochet and do handwork so they'd let us inside the restricted area. And then we'd teach them Bible lessons, too," explains Miss Kettler who speaks Hindi.

She has ridden in ox carts—"my oxomobile"—and walked in the 118-degree heat of the Raipur summers. "When I got tired and discouraged I'd tell myself that 'the joy of the Lord is my strength' and it would help."

Yesterday she reminded the other "elder sisters" that the way to stay young is to be interested in worthy causes and that's why "the ladies of Concordia will never get old."

All's in the Bag at Tomorrow's Grocery

By Lucia Brown

MORE and more of your groceries are going under wraps.

That is the outstanding impression you get from exhibits that are making Hotel Statler mezzanine look like one gigantic food store this week.

The wraps are the kind that reveal rather than conceal—cellophane, polythene, pliofilm, and such. They're on display in connection with the National Association of Food Chains meeting here. So are dozens of new kinds of equipment and gadgets designed to sell you a bill of packaged eating goods with speed and ease.

Flirting with the butcher will obviously be of no use if meat rationing ever comes again. The butcher won't even be there! He'll be chopping chops and trimming roasts strictly behind the scenes. You'll select the meat yourself, taking a transparent package marked with price and weight from an open double- or triple-deck refrigerator case.

This Paper "Breathes"

LEMONS, lettuce, cauliflower and apples are recent recruits to the transparent package parade in the exhibits. They're wrapped in paper that "breathes" at different rates of speed, since some vegetabels and fruits require more air than others. They say this package cuts down 40 percent on spoilage.

Baked goods packaged while hot were shown, too. A "breathing" wrap of celanese acetate (or box with window of same) lets heat and steam-ness escape, brings crusts to you all crisp and crunchy.

Another bottleneck breaker in the Statler exhibits is a "flying disc" which speeds up the pay-off. It's a counter partially formed by a big moving disc around the cash register. Customer B unloads her grocery baskets on one side while the checker totes up the cost of eats for Customer A just ahead of her. Then he shoves A's groceries on down the counter to a "bagger," presses a button and wheels B's purchases around in front of him. It's figured this will save the checker 15,000 pounds of lifting a day, beside's cutting customer waiting time.

Baby Can Ride

NEW kinds of rolling grocery baskets are making their debuts, too. One has a seat for the baby inside the basket. The old kind, in which baby rode on the outside, proved too dangerous, they say.

Decks of slanting shelves for automatically dispensing packaged drugs (yes, they're sold in some groceries, too, now!) . . . modern turnstiles that keep traffic moving smoothly . . . machines that cut, slice, cube, grind, tenderize and stack meat . . . "huskers" that unwrap oranges by the bushel and mark them with the price.

All these, and other marvels too, are on the mezzanine of the Statler. They conjure up beautiful dreams of a food store future where you'll never have to stoop, lift, weigh, pinch, hesitate or argue. Maybe next year there'll even be a gadget that will pay the bill!

Fashion Facts

By Sally Steele

Did you know that there are over 28 million women who are sewing this year? But how many of them will produce dresses and suits without that 'loving hands at home' look? Are you one of them?

Designing and making clothes with a custom-made look instead of a home-made look is not difficult. It is only a matter of being guided professionally. Home sewing will pay rich dividends if you learn French draping, pattern cutting, and construction. Specialized subjects, yes, but modern teaching methods combine them into one course.

Present classes at the Magda School (REpublic 3378) are now filled; new ones starting in November now rapidly filling.

Good News In Gloves

NYLON, the magic fabric, makes for good news in the glove department this season. Here it is employed in a double-woven suede finish to create a pair of sturdy, weather-wise gloves. Colors are black, brown, beige, green, wine, cloud gray and white. Available at The Hecht Co.

THE sheer nylon gloves that women found so handy last summer are being replaced with more sturdy models for winter. But they still launder in a flash and dry with equal aplomb.

Executed with a sueded finish, these nylon mittens are bound to find favor with all who like a quick change glove wardrobe. They are a boon to busy career women who like to add spanking white shorties to a dark business suit or dress. With a few of these easy-to-wash numbers they can always have a snowy pair handy.

Colors in glove fashions this winter are in tune with the popular neutral millinery shades. Beige and white tones are being used in both fabric and leather gloves, making effective contrasts to dark brown shoes and handbags.

Gloves dyed to match costumes are finding favor with many women. Blue gloves with a sapphire blue hat or dress are considered new and smart. Costumes in clear, rich red tones are frequently coordinated with red gloves, while true autumnal shades such as tango and orange to rust find nice accents in suede gloves of the same shade.

CAR to Restore Tomb Of Unknown Soldier Of '76 at Alexandria

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

DID YOU KNOW that there is a tomb of an unknown soldier of the Revolutionary War? Located in the old Presbyterian Meeting House grounds in Alexandria, it will be restored and publicized this year by the historic committee of Children of the American Revolution. This was one of several projects adopted yesterday at the CAR's national board meeting at Continental Memorial Hall.

Other projects adopted by the national board include the restoration of two rooms in historic Gadsby Tavern in Alexandria.

One new annual scholarship of $100 was given by Mrs. William H. Pouch of New York, past president of the CAR, to the society's supported school at Crossnore, N. C.

Three of the society's annual scholarships will be given this year in honor of individual officers, according to the board's vote yesterday. On a motion by Mrs. John Morrison Kerr one of the CAR $100 scholarships to the DAR School at Tamassee, S. C., will be given in honor of 82-year-old Mrs. Josiah A. Van Arsdel of Beatrice, Nebr. She is an honorary national president of the CAR.

The second annual scholarship to Tamassee will be given in honor of Mrs. Pouch.

A $100 scholarship to the DAR Kate Duncan Smith School in Alabama was donated by the National Officers Club of the CAR in honor of Mrs. Kerr.

Altrusas Hears Judge Cockrill

THE Washington Altrusa Club discussed ways to step up its local projects at a dinner meeting last night in the Brookings Institution.

Judge Edith Cockrill of District Juvenile Court outlined fields related to court work and juvenile delinquency problems in which interested groups could be of service.

A 10-member panel presented the organization's main fields of operation, which include giving scholarships to Latin-American women for graduate study in the United States.

The Altrusa International is composed of 255 clubs in the United States and foreign countries with a total membership of 8500.

Post Columnist Speaks

MRS. MARY van RENSSELAER THAYER, columnist of The Washington Post, told the Air Force Officers Wives Club of Bolling Field some of her experiences with the Air Force yesterday.

The tea, attended by approximately 450 women, was held at the Officers' Club at Bolling Field.

While visiting in California a year ago, Mrs. Thayer said, she became the only woman to fly in a jet plane up to that time—as far as she knows. What interested her most, she said, was that all her life insurance was canceled and the Lockheed Company had her insured by Lloyds of London. She smilingly added she was worth $25,000.

The newly-organized Women in the Air Force gave women an equal footing with the men in that branch of the service but it caused at least one complication, Mrs. Thayer said.

She told of the WAF who headed her class and the Aircorpsman she loved who was second in scholastic standing. Rather than give him an inferiority complex, she resigned and married him.

Mrs. Thayer was wearing a Jean Desses gown at the tea, the only one she bought in her recent trip to Europe. Made of light-weight black wool, the dress features a wraparound skirt which wraps 2½ times. Each layer is lined with taffeta and horsehair for stiffness.

Plan Youth Conservation

THE EXECUTIVE BOARD of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club yesterday adopted a resolution calling for a three-fold project in youth conservation.

The resolution includes (1) offering to a selected group of young people the opportunities to use the talents and skills of individual Chevy Chase Club members; (2) a program to be conducted by club members who elect to participate and are interested in sharing their talents; (3) the Chevy Chase Woman's Clubhouse to be available for small groups of youth with the authorization of the House Committee and with appropriate supervision of club members.

The proposal was adopted by the civics section Tuesday and approved by the executive board yesterday. The board will recommend adoption of the resolution by the entire membership at a meeting next Wednesday.

The youth conservation program of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club is a portion of the General Federation of Women's Clubs "Build a Better Community" project.

Spain Charge Entertains on Columbus Day

By Marie McNair

Columbus Day, the day that brought the Western Continent into being, was paid scant notice by Washington's citizenry yesterday.

Yet at the Spanish Embassy, the discovery of America was the reason for a large reception at which the new Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Propper de Callejon were hosts. And across the street at the new home of the Inter-American Defense Board, Columbus Day—whether by accident or design, was the day for their housewarming.

There's a new air at the Spanish Embassy this season, brought about by new furnishings and a collection of paintings of famous Spanish artists to line the walls. Oyster white brocaded satin covers the French furniture in the salon where wide windows are hung with pale gold satin draperies.

In the informal sitting room, there are oils of typical Spanish scenes, a beautiful portrait of a Spanish grand dame over the fireplace, which reminded me of the hostess if she had but thrown a lace mantilla over her dark hair. Instead, Senora de Propper chose an Infanta type gown with full short skirt of stiff taffeta in an odd shade of soft green.

Senora de Lequerica, who stood in the line with her husband, the Spanish Ambassador-at-large, was in black, a simply cut frock with a wide sash looped at the side and ending in gray fringe. Standing also to welcome the guests were Counselor of the Embassy, Gaspar Sans, and Second Secretaries Juan R. Parellada, Jaime de Pinies, Raimundo Perez Hernandez and Felipe Lazaro. Guests gathered around the fountain, bordered with fern and tropical plants, to sip drinks, or clustered about the buffet in the dining room, where there were turkeys and hams, salads and ice cream.

Practically all the Latin American envoys were on the scene, drifting in until 7:30. I saw the Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, just back from his native land, and the Ceylonese Ambassador, G. C. S. Corea, from the other side of the globe.

Then there were the Chilean Ambassador, Felix de Nieto del Rio; the Portuguese Ambassador, Theotonio Pereira, and goodlooking Mme. Rocheta, wife of the Counselor of the Portugese Embassy.

The Danish Ambassador, Hendrik de Kauffmann and Mme. de Kauffman in pale gray with a silver lame crowned hat, were among early callers.

In a lively group were Representative Dewey Short and Mrs. George Malone, wife of the Nevada Senator, and in what appeared serious conversation were the Swiss Minister, Charles Bruggman, Mrs. George V. Allen, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and the Minister of Luxembourg, Hugues LeGallais. Others there were former Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, the former Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewska, Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson who visited Spain in the spring; the Irish Minister, Sean Nunan; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard L. Thorp, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George C. McGhee, Mrs. W. Walton Butterworth, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian S. Fisher, the Ambassador to India, Loy Henderson; the American Ambassador-at-Large, Philip C. Jessup, and Mrs. Jessup; Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Stanley Woodward; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Hare, Raymond D. Muir, and Mr. and Mrs. Elbert G. Mathews.

India Prime Minister Heads Brilliant Group At Achesons' Dinner

ONCE again Anderson House has served as a setting for a brilliant gathering of statesmen and diplomats. A dinner was given there last evening by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson for the Prime Minister of India, Jawaharlal Nehru.

Orange, white, dark blue and light green flowers, colors of India, decorated the great hall where dinner was served. Doors leading to the garden were opened wide and there was string music from a section of the Marine Band Orchestra. Guests were received at 8 o'clock in the museum room by the Secretary and his wife, and cocktails were served on the terrace.

Gathering Distinguished

IN THE distinguished gathering were the Ambassador of India, Mme. Pandit, sister of the guest of honor; and the Prime Minister's daughter, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, who accompanied him on his flight from London; Sir Chinteman Deshukh, Ambassador-at-Large of the Government of India; Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, secretary general of the Ministry of External Affairs; the Minister of India and Mrs. B. R. Sen; the Military and Air Attache of India and Mrs. Dilip Chaudhuri, and D. P. Wagle, press trust of India.

Also, Associate Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter; the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder; the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Louis Johnson; the Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Julius A. Krug; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Charles Sawyer; the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Maurice J. Tobin.

General and Mrs. George C. Marshall were guests, as were Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Admiral and Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz, the chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, David Eli Lilienthal, and Mrs. Lilienthal; the president of the World Bank, Eugene R. Black, and Mrs. Black; Special Counsel to the President, Clark M. Clifford, and Mrs. Clifford; Mr. and Mrs. John C. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. J. Milton Kelly, and Mr. and Mrs. David C. Acheson.

Others in the company were the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Edwin Webb, the

Visits Chancery

IN THE afternoon at 4 o'clock the Prime Minister made a visit to the Indian Chancery on Massachusetts ave. After shaking hands with each member of the staff, he made a short speech. Members of the Indian community were received by Mr. Nehru, and tea was served.

Luncheon yesterday was informal at the Indian Embassy, Prime Minister Nehru and his daughter, Indira, enjoying a quiet talk with Ambassador Pandit. A visit was made to Mount Vernon at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at 11:30 a. m., the Prime Minister placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington.

Today Mr. Nehru will lunch on Capitol Hill, after meeting the United States House of Representatives at the New House Office Building at 12:15 noon and with the United States Senate at the Old Supreme Court Chambers at 12:45 p. m. 'Jumping Bean' A-leap Again

Ageless Gloria Swanson Whirls 'Cross Continent In Film Publicity Chore

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WHILE Gloria Swanson, whom pals rightly nickname the Mexican Jumping Bean, munched shredded wheat, asked for a second order of toast, answered a constantly shrilling telephone, talked to two completely strange men (presumably representatives of some local exposition for home furnishings), we managed to juggle a coffee cup, scoop a grapefruit and pick up an item here and there.

Versatile Miss S., who had just stepped from a sleeper, is in the agitated throes of embarking on a new career . . . publicity for the moving picture industry to help recapture what's called "The Lost Audience," for Paramount and their newest, "The Heiress" in particular.

As far as we can make out the new venture came about this way. Sometime last year Miss Swanson returned to filmland, to star in a vehicle called "Sunset Boulevard" (it's about a silent screen star of a quarter century ago who lives in seclusion dreaming of returning to former triumphs. Anyway, see for yourself in 1950. It's definitely NOT the story of Gloria's life, though).

She then returned to New York, did a six-month stint in television, had her appendix out and, while still convalescent was called by Hollywood to pick up her stitches and come out for another test. It was hot in New York, she owned a toybox Hollywood house complete with pool, so decided to use same.

Once in H'wood, the test successfully completed, she hung around for nine months because she became fascinated or should we say refascinated by the moving picture industry, and Paramount's very fine picture "The Heiress." She thinks Olivia de Havilland is the industry's finest actress; "The Heiress" an adult picture, its new camera technique as successful as it is revolutionary.

Her present tour involves day to two-day stops in leading cities. From here she'll go to Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, arriving in Los Angeles in time for the opening, October 20. She'll stay there an extra day for retakes of "Sunset Boulevard" then recross the continent.

During the tour her daily program, typed on several sheets of tissue-thin paper, looks like a jigsaw puzzle. Miss Swanson does something different every half hour—it's luncheons, cocktail parties, dinners, radio programs, television shows.

And Many Hats

HOW, we asked, did Miss Swanson have time to assemble a wardrobe, fix her face, get a manicure? Well, she was two weeks in New York, where she picked up a coupla suits, a coupla dresses, all mostly black—and innumerable hats since, she explained, you can't be constantly televised wearing the same headgear. The last-named she bought at John Frederics from her friend, Fred, who is also designing "The Heiress" hat. For, in addition to Miss Swanson, there's to be an ambitious "Heiress" campaign which will include heiress hats, dresses, compacts and, we believe, though can't remember rightly, undies.

Miss Swanson had one of the compacts. It's a real conversation piece. On the lid, picked out in colored stones, is an old-fashioned horse-drawn cab; the lipstick, which is attached, imitates a gas lamppost, the works has a removable slipcover of some shaggy material which resembles ponyskin!

Years Leave No Mark

WHAT DOES the Glamorous Gloria look like in the cold morning light? Just daisy! She's tiny, trig, minus all suspicion of double chin, her pert profile as cleanly cut as ever. She wore a black woolen dress finely checked with brown with a jutting front flare, very high-heeled black calf opera pumps, a huge drawstring black calf bag, a tiny calot of black velvet.

Her short cut hair, a lightish brown, barely curled around the edges. She's amusing about her appearance. "They all want to know," she laughed, "how the old girl looks!" Out in Hollywood, her eldest daughter, Mrs. Anderson, is a happy mamma. Her youngest, Michelle Farmer, recently was tested for the movies and will soon start a career of her own. "There's nothing I hate more than a theatrical mother," Miss Swanson insisted. "When I learned my daughter was about to become an actress—I went right back to New York."

P. S.—Miss Swanson thinks her role in "Sunset Boulevard" is the best she's ever had. And, she started her movie career, in the most wriggly-glammer roles, at the tender age of 14!

About Housewarming Party

Recently I moved into an old home which I am buying. Since it is my first permanent lodging I actually don't have the small necessities of housekeeping. I should like to give one entertainment to inform my very close friends, as well as some with whom I've almost lost contact, of my new home. Would a housewarming party be appropriate? Quite a few of my friends expect me to give one and they intend to give me small household articles, but how would the not-so-close friends take this? Should I just send them cards with the new address on them, leaving it up to them to visit me at their leisure?

T. H.

It would be lovely for you to invite all of your friends—intimate and not-so-close to a housewarming. Since you are giving the party, of course, you will make no mention on the invitation of gifts. If some of your intimate friends should arrive, gift in hand, thank them warmly and place the gift on a nearby table unopened. Open the gifts after the guests have departed and write short thank-you notes to each who brought a gift to show your pleasure.

Could you suggest some appropriate gifts for a couple (or individual gifts for the man and the woman) on their golden wedding anniversary? Also a "joint" gift for 5 or 6 children to give their parents on such an occasion?

B. H.

A lovely leather snapshot album with the honored couple's name in gold on the cover would be a suitable gift. To make the gift one that will be cherished, place new pictures of all children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren in it. These could be just snapshots, but they should reflect the daily activities of those near and dear to the anniversary couple.

A fine reading lamp, golden-hued household linens, paper napkins, or a leather-bound guest book with names printed in gold would also be acceptable gifts for the couple.

Individual gifts could include gold belt buckle, tie clasp, or gold backed military brushes for the "groom." Lapel pins, compact, or dresser accessories in gold would be lovely for the "bride."

Because so many persons celebrating their golden anniversaries have all the personal possessions with which they wish to clutter their lives, sometimes it is nice to give them a sum of money to be used for a long postponed trip, season concert tickets, hot-house flowers in January—some of the "little" things that six children and a budget would not allow. If you should choose to make your "joint" gift money, you could present it this way: Gilt a small tree with gold paint. Plant it in a flower pot also gilted or wrapped in gold. Now, onto the tree tie crisp new bills. Tie the string tightly around the center of the bill so the two ends flare out in a bow. As you present the gift, convince the couple that "since money does grow on trees" they must use this money for luxuries only.

For a week I had on the side of my refrigerator one of those black suction cups with a hook in it. After removing it, I found the rubber had left a yellowish circular stain on the porcelain finish. I have used soap and water, bleach and scouring powder, but the stain remains. Can you suggest something to remove the stain?

W. J. R.

Did you apply the bleach in such a way as to give it time to act on the stain? Perhaps if you will make a paste of bleach and scratchless scouring powder, spread it thickly on the stain and let it stand until dry, the stain will be removed. If it is lightened somewhat but not removed, repeat. Another product which might eliminate it is color remover sold where dyes are sold. Mix according to directions which come with the product and just sponge the spot with it.

If the discoloration has penetrated the depth of the enamel, it is doubtful that it can be completely removed.

In Child Training

Steer Clear Of Rigidity, Indulgence

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

NO MATTER what rules and regulations are laid down for mothers, someone is always going to misinterpret and misuse them.

When rigid schedules were in vogue, some mothers went to the lengths of watching the clock to make certain that their infants did not eat one minute sooner than the three or four-hour interval.

The self-demand schedules can be as foolishly misinterpreted. For, while it is good sense and good judgment to feed a baby when it is wide awake, crying and hungry, this does not mean that baby's every cry is a hunger cry. One woman fed her baby every two hours throughout the 24, with a result that it grew to an enormous size and cried ceaselessly.

Easy to Spoil Him

NO ONE but a monster would allow a baby to go hungry, no matter what the hour, but between this and feeding the baby at absurd intervals or picking him up each time he peeps, there is a real difference. Small babies do not cry to be entertained, but for some need which only an adult can satisfy. But, as he grows, a baby discovers for himself the mounting benefits of crying. If the mother carries her rules about relief to absurd lengths, she can develop a spoiled, hard-to-please child.

Toilet training rules can be interpreted to mean that a child is to be allowed to wet and soil himself with impunity until such time as he decides this is not the thing to do.

With a full recognition that age does make a lot of difference in a child's ability to control himself and that punishment can complicate instead of ending incontinent behavior, yet children do have to be introduced to training at about the 15th month and be put on the toilet consistently so that they will be shown the adult way of acting in order that habit and this imitation of grownups shall influence their conduct favorably.

Extremes Foolish

SO one can see that it is just as possible to carry the good principles of self-demand, not letting a baby cry and late toilet training, to the same foolish extremes as marked the behavior of some parents in the harsher days of regulated schedules and early training.

It is still necessary for mothers to think and apply all rules to their own home and their own children and not throw good sense out of the window in the belief that they are being modern.

2 Boys Killed As Big Piano Falls on Them

Cortland, N. Y., Oct. 12 (U.P.).—A young housewife watched helplessly today as an upright piano she was moving teetered on a loose board and toppled over on her two small sons and crushed them to death.

The victims were Douglas Stebbin, 4, and Roy Stebbin, 2, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Stebbin, of a rural section about 5 miles from here.

Dr. D. B. Glezen, Cortland County coroner, issued a verdict of accidental death. He said the children died almost instantly of fractured skulls.

State police said the 400-pound piano had been moved from the wall while Mrs. Stebbin was cleaning. The two children went behind the piano a loose board sagged and the piano began to tip. Mrs. Stebbin grabbed it frantically but before the children could move, the piano fell on them.

Takoma Park Citizens Group Is Disbanded

A lack of community interest and the fulfillment of its purpose has caused the Takoma Park Citizens Association of Maryland-D. C. to disband.

Whatever civic work there is left to do, the association decided to leave the numerous younger associations that have sprung up since the group was formed more than 60 years ago.

The six members who showed up at the last meeting at the Takoma Park Library Tuesday voted unanimously to dissolve. A month ago, it was brought out, 72 cards requesting member sentiment on the step were mailed out. Only about a dozen returned, about equally divided on the proposal.

In the final resolution, the association enumerated its achievements: successful drives for the library, Coolidge High School, improvements in transportation facilities and elimination of four grade crossings.

5 Candidates Give Views In Arlington

Five candidates for Arlington and State offices in the November State elections addressed the Parkway Citizens Association last night at Woodmont School, 2422 N. Fillmore st., Arlington.

They were: George Damm, Democratic incumbent in the House of Delegates; his Republican opponent, I. Lee Potter; Basil DeLashmutt, Democratic incumbent on the county board; his two opponents, Jacob P. Bechtel and Robert W. Cox, and Denman T. Rucker, Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney, who spoke for J. Maynard Magruder, also a Democratic incumbent in the House of Delegates.

Damm pointed to his record of two terms in the General Assembly and said he has supported progressive legislation for schools, health and welfare.

Potter charged that the Democratic organization changes the rules to suit themselves. He cited particularly its stand in the States Rights issue of the last national campaign.

DeLashmutt pointed to his record of "sound, progressive government" in his 10 years on the County Board.

Bechtel said he favored the best schools possible for Arlington, better roads and lower utility rates.

Cox said, if elected, he would seek an expanded recreation program, greater citizen participation in the planning of capital improvements and revision of the tax structure to eliminate inequities.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—John Barrymore, jr., who quit school to accept a movie job, returned from the studio after his first film and told his Aunt Ethel: "Acting is not easy." Miss Barrymore replied: "I know, dear, but I thought I'd better let you find that out for yourself" . . . Darryl Zanuck has been trying in vain to buy a million dollar insurance policy. The companies refuse to issue a policy because 10 years ago Zanuck played polo and hunted wild game. "If you did it once," they explained, "you may want to do it again" .

Harry Bridges flies United Airlines whenever he has a choice, because he says the other airlines tip-off the FBI when he makes a reservation. Airlines welcome Bridges' reservations because it always means good business—one ticket for the union leader, and two for the FBI . . . Tahiti will try to get a daily airline service, to lure dollars to the island. M. G. M. will send a film-unit there to spend some of the studio's blocked-francs in movie-making on the island . . . Zoe Akins listened to a radio debate between two articulate Senators who took turns in presenting their arguments. She said: "I most passionately agree with both of them."

At the Royal reception in London, following the wedding of the Earl of Harewood and Marion Stein, the bridegroom told an American visitor: "Yours is a fabulous country. From New York we received a wedding gift of a barrel-organ into which you put a penny and it plays 'Daisy, Daisy, Give Me Your Answer, Do'" . . . A veteran film-producer advised a newcomer: "If you ever like an actor, it proves that you don't know him very well" . . . Stewart Granger, the British actor who is in Hollywood for a two-week visit, had his British car shipped from New York to California via air—freight, for $450, then found he could have rented a similar one for $100 a week. Granger stepped into Schwab's drugstore to buy a tooth-brush, and then ordered $575 worth of stuff.

Oscar Levant walked out of a testimonial dinner where he saw the guest of honor's unattractive friends, and said: "Unpopularity has its points too" . . . Musicians who visit the home of Cyrus Adler are invited to play a quartet composed by Benjamin Franklin. Adler learned that Franklin once had composed such music, traced the manuscript until he found the present owner, and then bought it from him.

The Family Scrapbook

By Ernest G. Osborne

Mothers Are Cut Off

Not long ago I heard a panel of young G. I parents discussing their marriages and their children. It was a fine group—one of which any of us could be proud. They discussed the ways in which they shared responsibilities at home. Some of the wives were helping their husbands get through school by doing part-time work, even though there were children in the family. In general, there was an optimistic and healthy tone to the discussion.

One complaint was striking in its commonness. The young mothers felt that they were so tied down at home with the care of the house and of the children that they couldn't keep up with anything. They felt cut off from things they believed they should be doing.

Some felt strongly the importance of working through the League of Women Voters to help improve political conditions. Others had prepared themselves for certain jobs which they hoped later to carry one. Still others were concerned because they couldn't keep up with their husbands' interests. As they discussed the responsibilities they had under rather difficult housing conditions, it was clear that their complaint was justified.

We in America need women as full-fledged citizens just as much as we need men. Without denying the importance of their roles as mothers, wives and housekeepers, it is important for us to find ways in which our young mothers won't feel cut off while they are bringing up their children. I'll be glad to print pertinent suggestions in this column.

What's the Verdict?

FIRE OR COMBUSTION?

Q. A mercantile firm took out an insurance policy protecting goods in its warehouse against 'direct loss or damage by fire or lightning." A considerable quantity of materials in a dark corner of the warehouse was ruined by spontaneous combustion, which caused smoke and charred some of the goods, but which produced no glow. Does the fire insurance policy cover this loss?

A. "Fire," in such a policy, means fire as ordinarily understood. This means that the thing destroyed must have been ignited or ruined by the effect of a fire that flamed or glowed. Fire is one form of oxidation; spontaneous combustion is another. The former kind is the one contemplated by such an insurance policy. The insurance company is not liable.

Your Own October

October is the special month . . . I dedicate to you . . . Although of course the others hold . . . A certain meaning too . . . But it was in October when . . . I first beheld your eyes . . . And when I asked you questions and . . . I heard your soft replies . . . And it was in October when . . . We wandered hand in hand . . . And I inscribed your name and mine . . . Upon the shifting sand . . . You whispered that you loved me and . . . I hoped with all my heart . . . That someday we would share this life . . . And we would never part . . . And so when each October comes . . . With sunshine, rain or snow . . . I dedicate each day to you . . . Because I love you so.

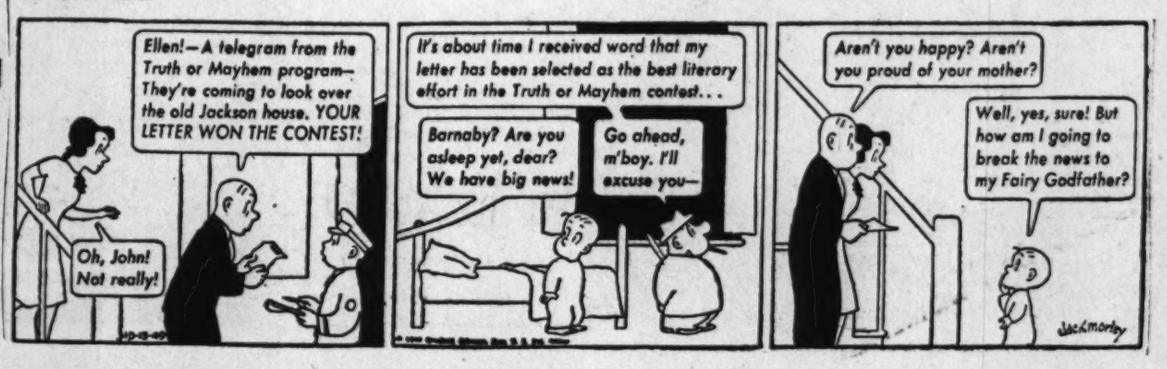
BARNABY



Ellen!—A telegram from the Truth or Mayhem program—They're coming to look over the old Jackson house. YOUR LETTER WON THE CONTEST!
Oh, John! Not really!
It's about time I received word that my letter has been selected as the best literary effort in the Truth or Mayhem contest...
Barnaby? Are you asleep yet, dear? We have big news!
Go ahead, m'boy. I'll excuse you—
Aren't you happy? Aren't you proud of your mother?
Well, yes, sure! But how am I going to break the news to my Fairy Godfather?

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Lights Cost Money, But What's the Price of A Child's Life?

The current edition of "The Easterner," student publication at Eastern High School, is sharply critical of traffic authorities for failing to install a light at the corner of 17th and E. Capitol sts.

The paper points out that since 1945, 31 accidents have occurred at the intersection, which is used by 2000 pupils from neighboring schools.

The paper says that a light was "promised" for the corner nine years ago; and it wonders whether another nine years will pass before the promise becomes reality.

What the kids forget is that the students who wanted that light nine years ago seem to have grown up into "economy-minded" adults who oppose higher taxes—without which you can't have more lights.

KID STUFF

Mrs. Charles G. Jaquette of 36 Hawaii ave. ne. reports that she's found a fine way to keep her young children quiet for a while.

They play "going to the movies."

However, I'm afraid that the plan won't work after the children are old enough to attend their first Saturday matinee. The audience makes more noise than the cowboys.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two beautifully marked, playful, part-Maltese kittens, 8 weeks old. Will deliver." (Fairfax 554-W.)

"Friendly, housebroken black and white cat; we're leaving town." (Executive 9582.)

"Very cute, affectionate 3-month-old male dog; good with children." (Ordway 5698.)

IT'S STILL A MESS

Ordinarily I have a great respect for Traffic Director George Keneipp's work.

But at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw. I think Mr. Kenei,p has come a $45,000 cropper.

That's how much the "channelization" at this busy intersection cost the District—and for the life of me I can't figure out what good it did.

Traffic coming down from Capitol Hill has never been any great problem, and isn't now, either. It's the traffic bound UP the hill that runs into difficulty.

Those who want to go straight through on Constitution ave. run afoul of those who want to go straight through on Pennsylvania ave., because the two streams of traffic are expected to cross each other while both have a green light.

And $45,000 worth of "channelization" has done nothing to alleviate that condition. It has merely widened the field of combat by one lane.

If that's considered a solution to the problem then I invite Mr. Keneipp to make a couple of trial runs past the corner—and not necessarily during the rush hour.

OPERATION DUPONT

The Dupont Circle's tired old face
Is getting lifted to replace
Her antiquated countenance
With one of modern elegance.
But staunch old friends are up in arms
That she should change her sweet old charms
And undergo such pain, because
They liked her fine the way she was.

Yet they're intrigued as anyone
In how the operation's done.
E. Culbreth.

PIED TYPE DEPT. DIES HARD

Literally scores of letters have reached this desk in the past month starting with the words, "Speaking of typographical errors, how about the enclosed?"

I can't imagine what prompts readers to use those words, because I haven't even mentioned typos for weeks—and the last time I did, it was to remind you that we had called a halt to Pied Type items, because of lack of space.

In fact, I'm now running out of space in which to explain that we don't have space for typos.

THE WINNERS COME HOME BY CAB

Herb Harris notes that Capital Transit's buses on the run to the Laurel race track are equipped with white toweling on each seat.

"Mighty thoughtful of them," muses Herb, "to supply the players with individual crying towels."

Sparks Fly In Truman's Senate Tiff

By Drew Pearson

It has been kept out of the papers, but sparks have been flying between two of President Truman's most potent congressional leaders — Vice President Barkley and Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois.

LUCAS

Things came to a head when the Vice President, called upon to settle a tie, voted for rigid 90 percent support of parity farm prices, which the Administration opposed. Senator Lucas, faced with defeat, lashed out at Barkley privately in language unprintable in a family newspaper.

"What does Barkley know about farming!" stormed the Democratic Senate leader. "He has a few tobacco farms down in Kentucky, but he knows nothing about the agricultural problems of the great West."

Lucas, whose nerves are frazzled after the long and thankless job of riding herd on rebellious Senators, further accused Barkley of torpedoing the farm program and embarrassing him personally.

"Who ever heard of anyone explaining his vote? scorched Lucas, referring to the fact that the Vice President, in breaking the tie, had explained that he had campaigned for parity price support. "It's unheard of in the history of the Senate."

Barkley was not present during this tirade, which was meant for private ears. But word of it got back to him and it won't help relations between the two men who are supposed to guide the Truman program through the Senate.

Unhappy Admiral

Unhappiest admiral in the Navy today is probably Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations, one of the squarest shooters ever to command a battle wagon.

Denfeld is right in the middle of the Navy-Air Force battle, a battle he did not start. Now that it's started, he is publicly siding with his brother admirals. But before it started, he expressed the private view that the Navy could better use more money for submarines and smaller airplane carriers, rather than putting all its eggs in the giant experimental airplane carrier that has now become the war cry of the admirals.

Rows like the present flare-up are not unusual in the Navy, and the situation between Admirals Radford and Denfeld is not unlike a similar Navy fracas that harvested just as many headlines back in the Hoover Administration.

At that time, the admirals, who always worship bigness, were bent on building a lot of 10,000-ton, 8-inch-gun cruisers, and refused to go along with Secretary of State Stimson on a treaty of limitation. Spearhead of the Navy attack against Stimson was salty Admiral Hilary Jones—the Admiral Radford of his day.

But siding with Stimson, and holding the same Chief of Naval Operations job that Admiral Denfeld occupies today, was Admiral William V. Pratt. Pratt believed that smaller cruisers with 6-inch guns could fire faster, and were more effective at close range or at night.

The Admirals Leak

As today, the admirals arranged a series of "leaks," and threatened the resignation of Admiral Jones. As today, various Congressmen took up the cudgels and debated the pros and cons of the 8-inch-gun and 6-inch-gun cruiser—much to the delight of the Japanese and British navies.

But it was not until the battle of the Graf Spee that Admiral Pratt, whose latter years were made miserable by his fellow admirals, was completely vindicated. In this famed battle off the River Plate, the British navy with small, fast-moving 6-inch-gun cruisers was completely victorious over the 10,000-ton German cruiser carrying 8-inch guns.

What Admiral Pratt had argued in the face of almost every other admiral about the speed and mobility of the small cruiser, was proved right.

And the fact that Pratt and Secretary Stimson forced the Navy into building some fast 6-inch-gun cruisers turned out to be the Navy's salvation when it came to patroling the vast South Pacific during the recent war.

Shirley Highway Gets You There in a Breeze

Five Minute Ride From D. C. Line

THE SHOPPER with a distaste for traffic lights should fall in love with the Shirley hwy., Virginia's most ambitious highway project, and the main entry to the Shirlington Shopping Center from the District and northern Virginia.

Traveling south via the Shirley, the motorist passes the last traffic light on 14th st. at the Bureau of Engraving. After that, he can go like the wind—up to 40 and 50 mph speed maximums, anyway.

There isn't a traffic light until Woodbridge, Va., about 20 miles away at the intersection of U. S. Route 1.

Entry and departure from the Shirley is made only from cloverleaf turn-offs. Traveling south, the first full cloverleaf, complete with two overpasses, is at Shirlington, where motorists turn for the shopping center, Parkfairfax and Fairlington apartments, and various small subdivisions.

SINCE the newest section of the Shirley hwy. opened last month, highway engineers have estimated the road is used by 28,000 autos daily, with most of them passing the entrance to Shirlington. The strategically located center apparently gets its share of them, judging by a recent Arlington traffic survey, which showed that an average of 10,000 automobiles bring shoppers into Shirlington each day.

The Center is approximately 5 miles and 8 minutes from Constitution and 14th st. nw. It is also easily reached by traveling over Memorial Bridge and taking Washington blvd. to the Shirley.

Time and Mileage Saver

THE NEW SHIRLEY, opened to the public just last month, shaves off about 3.4 miles and 12 minutes from the old North-South Route 1 through Alexandria. It is expected to absorb 80 percent of all traffic between Woodbridge, Va., and Washington. At present, interstate trucks are barred from the highway.

Completion of the new artery is expected to open up thousands of acres of nearby Virginia farmland for real estate development. The undeveloped sections of Southeast Fairfax County, beyond Shirlington, can be reached easily in 20 minutes after passing the Potomac.

SHIRLEY MEMORIAL HIGHWAY SNAKES INTO FAIRFAX

. . . in right foreground is Shirlington Business Center

The expressway is named in memory of the late Henry G. Shirley, who died in 1942 after serving 22 years as Virginia's highway commissioner. Only a few weeks before his death Shirley had given the green light for the expressway in order to better prepare northern Virginia for wartime traffic needs.

Due to shortages, however, construction on the Virginia phase of the project was postponed until October, 1945. The 2.2-mile stretch between the Pentagon building network and the Alexandria-Leesburg pike (Route 7) was completed during the war.

Scenic Views

THE HIGHWAY has a "design speed" of 70 miles per hour, but you'll get a ticket if speed cops catch you doing over 50 miles an hour. The first 7 miles from Woodbridge, where only the southbound road has so far been completed, is used by traffic headed both ways. The remainder is four lanes with a grassy strip between.

Grading and finishing of the superhighway has produced interesting scenic views. Valleys have been filled, hills sliced through to provide a minimum of turns, a maximum of "straightaways." Thus, the motorist often passes through a filled-in valley at tree-top height.

Construction of a highway from Manassas, Va., east to the new Shirley has been recommended in a report to the Northern Virginia Planning Commission. It would pass through Fairfax Station, Burke and Springfield, meeting the Shirley about a mile south of Lincolnia.

Area's Shoppers 'Best-Educated'

"THE best-educated customers on earth."

That's the way one Shirlington merchant describes shoppers in his area. He is Edward Taub, proprietor of the "Clothes Horse," a store that used to be located on Connecticut ave. but recently moved its "little white horse with the long white mane" out to a Shirlington show window.

A lot of women in the area do home sewing, says Mr. Taub, save their money to buy really excellent clothes when they get ready-mades. You can't fool them, he says, for they know values and manufacturers.

His shop, decorated in the modern manner in heather and plum, specializes in individual service, often buying clothes in New York to fit exact wishes of customers. It does a large business in maternity dresses in this community of young mothers.

Small Fry Parks Pistols and Gum, Take 'Turn' at Shirlington Movie

By Sonia Stein
Post Reporter

AS BEFITS a theater situated in a community where the apartment houses accept small fry, the Shirlington Theater offers two westerns, or a western and a comedy on Saturdays.

This attracts the children who arrive complete with guns, blackjacks, and bubble gum. All shooting irons and slingshots must be checked with the doorman (except for what can be hidden under the coat, naturally) and bubble gum must be disposed of.

The din inside on a Saturday afternoon keeps away all but a few brave adults, mainly mothers who enjoy the picture as best they can without hearing a word of the dialogue.

Real bedlam breaks out occasionally. It comes in types—one week it is fashionable to blow peas through a pea shooter, the next week lobbing marbles at each other and rolling them down the aisle is in vogue, and then water pistols have a turn.

David McClain who manages this theater for the Alexandria Amusement Corp., takes it all as a matter of course. Like his brothers before him, he began to usher as soon as he could hold a flashlight. Now at 22, he's a veteran at handling children diplomatically. And in spite of all the screaming, lost children, he still likes them.

SHIRLINGTON THEATER
. . . seats almost 1000 people

Has Its Following

FOR THE ADULTS, the theater starts showing at 7 p. m. weekdays, and 1:30 on Sundays.

Although the pictures have been shown in downtown Washington and in Alexandria before they ever reach Shirlington, the theater has its own following. People call and ask if and when a particular picture is coming, and some just bide their time.

Sometimes, a revival or an especially popular picture will bring calls from as far away as Chevy Chase and Bethesda, from people who are anxious to catch something they've missed.

The seating capacity of the theater is 980 but since 300 patrons a night is average, there's a good choice of seats under normal circumstances. Recently, the "Fuller Brush Man" with Red Skelton set a record and created a standing-room-only situation by 7:45 p. m.

Babes in Arms

ON THE WHOLE, McClain finds his customers similar to the patrons of downtown theaters. More babies are brought in to sleep peacefully—it is hoped—in their mother's arms than is common in downtown theaters.

And the Shirlington has an added geographic hazard: There is an ice cream store right next door, and some people just don't understand why McClain won't let them bring their ice cream cones inside to drip on other patrons and make slippery spots on the carpet.

A bottle of stinging medicinal alcohol in the first aid kit discourages the kids from running around the lobby and getting skinned knees at the Shirlington—a

Jelleff's Wish completing our 2nd Shirlington Year

We celebrate this great Shirlington occasion by having unusually fine assortments of New Fashions at Jelleff prices to make this already popular branch of the Jelleff store even more popular.

Our sincere thanks go to the women of this community for their ever-growing interest. Week by week, month by month, more and more patronage flows through our doors as women come to know better what a Jelleff store means to a community, and we, in turn, come to learn more and more what the community wants.

Here was our first venture into infants' and children's wear and we are glad to say that this has become a most important part of Jelleff's.

Again, many thanks to Shirlington!
We shall continue always to make this a better and better place to shop.

Big Town Stores Operate Branches at Shirlington

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

LOTS of toddlers . . . bare-headed mothers in sweaters and skirts . . . an occasional pappa pushing a perambulator . . .

It's these—the customers—that make all the difference between the Shirlington branch stores and their big downtown relatives. The merchandise is the same. The selection is astonishly varied. It's only the shopping atmosphere that is in striking contrast.

Easy neighborliness is the keynote. It's like a small town, only newer, more modern. Filene's in Boston was never like this! Of course, the Filene's in Shirlington is run on a different basis. As you may recall, it's the first cooperative department store founded by Consumer Distribution Corp., an organization endowed by the late Edward A. Filene, of Boston.

A lot of Shirlingtonites own stock in this store, but others simply shop there and thank their lucky stars for such a nice big department store in their community. The store opened in 1947.

Jelleff's, Inc., Washington women's clothing store, has a nice branch in Shirlington. It's the second largest of their five branch stores, and opened two years ago. Children's and infant's wear is sold in this shop, though no other Jelleff's stores carry it.

Part of Chain

THERE'S an Ann Lewis specialty shop for women, too, part of a national chain. Not far away is the Adeline Shop, one of seven of this type catering to misses and women in the Greater Washington area.

For men only is Woodrow's, one of four stores of this name selling masculine apparel in the District and vicinity. A. S. Beck, the F st. shoe store, has a smart-looking Shirlington branch. So does Berger's, which operates a large hosiery store between F and G downtown as well as this one.

Cohen's sells mirrors and pictures in Shirlington, carrying the same sort of stock as at its main store on G st. The Mill End Shop, newest one in a 20-year-old chain, offers customers a chance to buy drapery and upholstery materials at cut rates. Gude's, well-known Washington florist, operates an attractive shop on South Randolph st.

Sewing Classes

SOME 1600 women and girls have learned to sew at the big Singer Co. branch in Shirlington since it opened 16 months ago. Classes are going constantly from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.—on basic sewing, making coats and suits, and home decorating, and for 'teen-ager. The company sells sewing machines and other supplies and equipment.

Woolworth's has a very modern Shirlington store, opened in 1946. There's an excellent restaurant in it, which even serves dinner on some nights. Like many other Shirlington shops, this one stays open two nights a week until 9 p. m.

The Hot Shoppe in Shirlington also stands ready and waiting to serve you an excellent meal. The restaurant is one of the nicest in this well-known local chain.

Next to the Hot Shoppe—and occupying an entire short block—is the Gulf Station. This one pumps more gas (sells it, that is) than any other Gulf station in the Greater Washington area.

Second Largest

THE FIRESTONE TIRE AND RUBBER CO. store in Shirlington is the second largest one in this area. It's also the newest, though it will be outdone by Clarendon when the branch there opens October 15. Tires, automobile accessories, refrigerators, television sets, and small household equipment are sold there.

Two fine modern groceries in Shirlington are members of chains. There's the Shirley Food Store, which has two sister stores in Arlington County. It's in its sixth year of operation, went completely self-service last year.

The Acme Store next door is owned and operated by the American stores. It's entirely self-service, too, having been renovated last year. You can pick out a cellophane package of anything from soup meat to sirloin, all clearly marked with the price, from open refrigerated meat cases. Other cold boxes hold frozen foods, cheese, and other dairy products.

The American Family is still our Greatest Institution!

Nothing that we have seen or experienced in the more than two decades of Hot Shoppe service to the community has altered our belief in the importance of the Hot Shoppe purpose —"good food for the family."

Through a depression, a world war, and a huge growth in population, our particular business has served, and prospered, only with the realization that the "family" attitude of Americans remains basically unchanged.

A healthy, happy, contented environment — both within and without the home — is demanded by the American family. When eating out, balanced meals and immaculate surroundings are the first family requirements. Surely, the family will go elsewhere if these fundamentals are not strictly observed.

With this recognition we have steadily enjoyed a growth from one Hot Shoppe to strategically-placed Hot Shoppes in every important center of greater Washington. The Shirlington Hot Shoppe is an outstanding example of this growth.

We have added, in recent years, our Pantry Houses that supply food "to take home" for thousands. These Pantry Houses are also becoming increasingly popular because they maintain the same unvarying standards of excellent food prepared in impeccable surroundings.

The American Family is still our greatest institution. We take this opportunity to restate our purpose, rededicate our efforts and reaffirm our faith in the proposition that "food for the family" is, within itself, a worthy endeavor.

English Shopper Sounds Shirlington's Praise

Lavish Offerings Enthuse Bride

THAT twentieth century innovation, the shopping center, is a welcome bit of Americana, according to attractive Mrs. C. B. DeGavre, who met her American Army officer husband while he was stationed in her native England.

Lieutenant Colonel DeGavre, now on duty at the Pentagon, and his wife are living in Claremont, a new residential community a few blocks west of Shirlington Shopping Center. Mrs. DeGavre has patronized the Center extensively since her arrival here six months ago.

Shopping techniques are far different here than in Fairford, the small Gloucestershire village, 85 miles west of London, where Mrs. DeGavre was born. The lavishness of Shirlington offerings, the lack of rationing—these delight her.

So do the self-help features of both Shirlington food stores.

She appreciates most the vast array of frozen foods. These items are just becoming available in England, she reported, but only in a few staples. There's no frozen fish as yet, for instance.

The rich flour in America has played havoc with some of her prize recipes, she complained. It's ground much finer than the English brand.

A widow with two boys, 9 and 11 years, when she met her American husband, Mrs. DeGavre said both sons had grown 4 inches in the last six months. They are especially crazy about sweet potatoes, a rarity in England.

The plentiful supply of milk is another blessing. It is still rationed in England. Like most American housewives she tries to do the bulk of her shopping once a week, buying fresh vegetables and bread as needed.

What does she consider especially striking about Shirlington? Well, she can't get over the fast and efficient service of the cleaners, the great number of articles sold at the drugstore, the wonderful ice cream and convenient movie.

Shoes are much cheaper here, the wide choice of cotton goods is striking, and "these wide, wonderful American roads. I just can't get over them. And all that petrol!" Gas is still rationed in England.

. . . shops and supermarkets are wonderful in unrationed Shirlington

Mrs. DeGavre also had a few well-chosen words of praise for her hairdresser at Shirlington and the yard goods shops. And other stores—but she's still looking for a good cup of tea!

"American tea is almost as bad as British coffee," she exclaimed. Having tasted English coffee, this reporter predicts the DeGavre household will stick to milk. CONRAD P. HARNESS.

Valuable Prizes Offered

Prizes to be given away during Shirlington's Fifth Anniversary, October 10-15, include a brand new 1949 Ford, 2 Philco television sets, a Youngstown garbage disposer and a Lewyt vacuum cleaner. Entry blanks are available at all Shirlington stores.

Controlled Competition

Controlled competition is the guiding factor in granting leases to new business enterprises at Shirlington. Normally speaking, there is only one store of the same price range.

Estimated income of families in the Shirlington trading area is $5000 per year.

Fashion Show Spices Celebration

10 Center Shops Offer Pin-Money Styles for Family

By Peggy Preston
Post Reporter

FASHION had a pretty inning this week as residents of the Shirlington area celebrated the fifth birthday of their shopping center.

Monday afternoon the feminine contingent shut up shop and trooped around to the Shirlington theater for a gala fashion review. Entitled "Pin-Money Fashions," the show was aimed at pleasing the thrifty housewife and the working gal.

The several hundred who attended saw a parade of well styled costumes that suited their pocketbooks as well as their tastes. No one went home with the gloomy afterthought—"It was lovely, but I could never afford it."

Shirlington clothing shops cooperated in assembling and presenting the group of moderate-priced fashions. All members of the family were considered, including Dad, just for a change. Junior was not neglected either. Indeed there were clothes shown for all the small fry, modeled by members of the young set themselves.

Climaxing the show was an evening gown which proved once and for all the price is not everything in fashion. Made of rich, heavy satin, it is a copy of a Paris import by designer Jacques Fath. It was cut and sewn, for a minimum of dollars, at Shirlington's Home Stitch Shop.

In the ready-made division there was a good looking array of fall suits and coats. Fabrics included tweeds, flannels and gabardines in a wide variety of colors. Sheer wools for daytime dresses and ribbed rayon fabrics for late afternoon frocks figured prominently in the collection.

Each costume was completely accessorized with matching hat, gloves, handbag, shoes, stockings and jewelry.

Sports Attire Flames

THE emphasis was on informal, sports attire in the fashions that were shown for men. Included were several brightly colored tweed and flannel jackets, worn with slacks and shirts in contrasting shades. In addition were business suits in hard-finished worsteds.

Mrs. Alvin Ehrlich, Washington model, was commentator for the fashion show and officiated at the presentation of prizes which followed the review.

Shirlington firms participating in the event included Ann Lewis, Nugent's, Jelleff's, A. B. Beck, The Clothes Horse, the E. A. Filene Co-op Department Store, Berger's, Jerry's Kiddie Center, Shirlington Jewelry Store, and the Ted Lewis Men's Shop.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

What's the future for Shirlington? Motor magnate Cherner has backed up his faith in Shirlington with hard cash, plowing back profits into new stores and improvements. There is space for 30 more stores. Cherner is announcing no new plans for the future, but he expects the next five years to be just as exciting as the last five, with Shirlington taking its place as the Nation's No. 1 community business center.

'Grab Opportunity,' Is Cherner's Success Formula

deliveries to Hoffman instead of 10 percent on 14 cents a day.

Two years of peddling dough in varied forms and Joe Cherner switched to deliveries for a soft drink wholesaler, because of the inducement of a company car which he could use when not working.

He learned the business; in 1920 opened his own soft drink firm, the Washington Beverage Co., good for $7000 to $8000 clear a year.

Meanwhile, in 1921 while on business in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., he met an orphan girl of 17. That was on May 15.

"I knew her three days and we were engaged. What they call love at first sight. I'd never gone out with a girl alone before—always it was with a crowd. I guess because I was shy."

"I saw her again May 22, May 23, May 24 and didn't see her again until June 2. Ruth and I were married on June 23."

Then in 1925, at the ripe old age of 27 Joe Cherner retired—for two years. He'd been buying rundown real estate, fixed it up, sold it at a handsome profit, reinvesting in other property for income. He was receiving $100 a week, and thought that would be enough.

"But the next two years I was the most miserable man on earth. I didn't know what to do with myself . . . So I went back into business, not to make money, just to keep busy."

Here Come the Autos

IN 1927 he bought the bankrupt Liberty Garage, 1781 Florida ave. nw., convinced it was an ideal location, bankrupt only because the owners weren't giving it enough "personal attention.'

Attention he gave it, often until 3 a. m., never leaving till all cars in his live storage business were accounted for, supervising every last detail.

When storage slumped in the summertime, he remodeled, installed gas tanks. The macabre dance of the ticker tape came in 1929, dealers folded up and Ford Co. was looking for outlets. They offered Joe Cherner an agency, and he accepted against his banker's advice.

Since then the Cherner pattern has been burgeoning expansion:

He hired the best mechanics to overhaul the traded-in cars on an assembly line basis.

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post.

He got to know the customers by name and, gifted with a dramatic flair, learned to reach chinks in their sales resistance

He found the more he advertised the more he sold, the more he made.

Arthur Godfrey provided the monicker "Uncle Joe," and an advertising agency has been hitting that light, personal note ever since.

Joe Cherner time and again recognized possibilities in impossible situations. Like the man who bought a used Model-A with a 30-day guarantee and demanded repairs nine months later.

Profitable Convert

"TELL you what I'll do," said Joe Cherner. "I'll overhaul the car completely, no cost to you, but on one condition."

The condition: The owner must stand by and watch the chernerizing operation. Cherner would pay him for the time he lost by not working.

"I'm crazy like that and I want you to know it," Cherner told the flabbergasted customer.

"He was a painter, making $5 a day," Joe Cherner recalls with utter satisfaction. "It took two days and I paid him $10 for watching.

"That man has become my best salesman. He told every friend how crazy I am and I still have customers coming in recommended by that painter."

As for the Shirlington project, that was another case of opportunity knocking at the right man's door.

"I was thinking of buying a piece of property out there but when an official of the Defense Homes Corp. told me the price, it was not for me.

"But he mentioned this marshland out there which he thought might be worth development."

Joe Churner looked at it, decided it would be ideal for an airport when Ford started selling flivver planes. Then he learned housing was abuilding for 30,000 people. He organized a syndicate, retaining a 50 percent interest, later securing a controlling interest, and the Shirlington Shopping Center was born.

"They told me I was crazy, I'd lose every penny I ever made."

From Zero to $400,000

JOE CHERNER forged ahead, with a novel twist.

Instead of just plain rent, his terms with lessees was a low minimum rent coupled with a percentage of each store's gross take, ranging from 1½ to 15 percent. The yield last year was about $400,000.

"Now I'm the only landlord whose tenants are happy when they pay more rent."

But is Joe Cherner happy?

His answer:

"If I could do it all over again I think I'd do it differently—try to live like other people."

Trouble is, he says, is that "I never learned to relax, to play. I never was a boy; I never had time."

He can't get his mind off business, or his other abiding preoccupation—Israel. He gave $100,000 to the United Jewish Appeal and is an executive of many local and national Jewish organizations.

"My first love is America and always will be first. But I can't see how it hurts America if someone tries to make a home in Israel for the Jews of Europe who are not wanted in Europe.

Another love is his family—"I could never have been a success without a happy home life."

He's peacock proud that his four daughters, Thelma, 25; Nadine, 23; Roberta, 17, and Margery, 15, are accomplished, well-educated and wholesome—not the spoiled brats of a rich man.

"I gave them personal attention," says the supersalesman. "I taught them the value of a dollar and I made them know I was not just a father, I was someone they could confide in—and they do."

Ruminates Once More

BUT with all this and a 20-room, $40,000 mansion atop a hill at 1630 Juniper st. nw.—built of course when construction costs were depressed—life is still not perfect for Joe Cherner.

"I wonder if it was worth all the sacrifices," he muses in rare moments of introspective reflection. "I have my doubts."

"Millionaires are no longer a novelty in this country," he opines. 'Maybe I'd be happier today if I had just worked eight hours, played eight hours and slept eight hours every day."

However that may be, he's in love with the United States for the opportunities that came his way. So much so he doubts if he will ever set foot on land that is not American.

He has what he calls a "superstitious fear" that maybe the Horatio Alger dream which he has realized will crash in disaster "if for just one minute I should leave this country." He never has.

Center Spurs Home Sales

NEW RAMBLERS OFF SEMINARY ROAD
. . . near the Washington-Virginia Airport

THE GIGANTIC Shirlington Shopping Center has proven a top factor in sales of homes in South Arlington. The center attracts potential home buyers to its trading area, with 48 stores, movie, post-office and 12 offices as the bait.

It serves as the hub of a large housing wheel including the sprawling Parkfairfax and Fairlington garden apartments.

Builders find it good business to develop land near large shopping communities. Of course, it works both ways. Shirlington Shopping Center draws customers from nearly every new home or apartment in south Arlington, nearby Alexandria and nearby sections of Fairfax County, Va.

What started as purely a south Arlington shopping center is now attracting customers from all over the metropolitan area. It is only 8 minutes from downtown Washington, and a large parking area is available.

Recent opening of the new high-speed, four-lane Shirley hwy. from the Pentagon to Woodbridge, Va., which passes right by the Center, is expected to mean increased business volume at Shirlington, which is just 1½ miles from the Pentagon, reached via the first full clover-leaf off the highway as the motorist travels south.

New subdivisions expected to be developed off the new Shirley Highway at Lincolnia, Franconia, Springfield and places in between will bring added customers to Uncle Joe Cherner's emporium.

Shirlington now draws the bulk of its daily shoppers from the large subdivisions nearby. For example, Parkfairfax accommodates about 1600 families on a 200-acre tract adjacent to Shirlington. North and south Fairlington, with 3439 family units on 322 acres keeps cash registers ringing at Shirlington's 48 stores.

Other nearby developments are Fort Barnard Heights; Arna Valley; the 250-home project of Claremont, plus the proposed 519-unit Clarement Communities Apartments, both off Leesburg pike; Virginia Heights and the area around the Theological Seminary on Seminary rd.

Dominion Gardens, Old Glebe rd., 214 units; Fillmore Gardens, S. Fillmore and 9th sts.; Washington & Lee Apartments, Washington and Lee blvds.; Frederick Courts, 164 units, Columbia pike and S. Frederick st.; Barcroft, 464 units, Columbia pike and S. George Mason dr.; Park Glen, 192 units, Columbia Pike at Arlington Mill dr.

Also Tyler Gardens, Falls Church; Columbia Heights, S. Greenbrier st. and Columbia pike; Magnolia Gardens, 166 units, 5131 Columbia pike; Virginia Gardens, 16th st. and S. Taylor; Parkwood & Donna Lee, about 510 units, at Leesburg pike and Glen Carlin dr.; Claremont Communities, 519 units, Leesburg pike at S. 28th st.

The proposed 2113-unit Shirley Duke Apartments, at the intersection of Shirley hgwy and Duke st. extended, will be the biggest postwar rental project in the Shirlington area.

Only One Rival

COMMUNITY shopping centers have proven quite popular. Practically every large local subdivision developed within the last five years includes acreage for a proposed shopping center. Of those proposed, none will be the size of Shirlington, with the possible exception of the planned city of Springfield about 5 miles down the Shirley hgwy.

There, several builders and developers plan a complete city of 25,000 population, with all city facilities. Construction on the first 200 homes is expected to start sometime next year.

Washington has no monopoly on such centers. Successful ones have been operating for years in Kansas City, Los Angeles, Houston, Tacoma, Minneapolis, Oklahoma City and other cities.

The independent grocer, druggist or dry cleaner, with his solitary store on the corner, is rapidly disappearing from the American scene, especially in the urban areas. The vast trade centers with 10 to 50 stores, with limestone fronts, gleaming expanses of windows, fluorescent lights, lavish interior decorations, and plenty of parking space, are increasing.

At the Movie

vast improvement over just cautioning them, McClain discovered.

"Mashers" are quickly spotted when they move from seat to seat in search of prey. McClain simply sits behind them to keep them under surveilance. They catch on in a hurry.

The most inexplicable items he's had turned in at the end of a day were a pair of sox, worn and crumpled, and a pair of shoes. He doesn't know if the owner walked out in his bare feet or not.

The other things are all routine, as McClain explains pulling the current haul out of its box. Along with the assorted hats and wallets was a copper cup engraved with the words, Spring Dance, 1941 and a pair of handcuffs.
